MINISTER OF LANDS WILL COME TO COAST

MEMBER OF SOUTH WALES CABINET TO BE VISITOR

Neil Neilson Will Make Thorough Investigation of Various Systems Practiced in the Irrigation States.

Spokane, Wash., June 5.—Neil Neilson, minister of lands in the New South Wales cabinet, will come to the Pacific slope country early in September to make a thorough investigation of the various systems practiced in the irrigation states, according to advices received by the Spokane Chamber of Commerce from Sidney.

Mr. Neilson plans to visit many districts in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Wyoming, South Dakota, Texas, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico, also the government plants in Nebraska and Kansas, going thence to Chicago and New York. He will confer with the Australian authorities in London and visit the principal cities on the continent.

Percy Hunter, vice president of the Hands-Around-the-Pacific club, who is slated for under secretary of New South Wales, has come to the Northwest on a similar mission as director of the New South Wales Immigration and Tourist Bureau, to which position he was appointed by Sir Joseph Carruthers, prime minister of New South Wales. He also contemplates visiting various parts of the United States to familiarize himself with irrigation methods.

Mr. Hunter was interested in the inland empire by Victor M. Smith, minister of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, while making a tour of the Pacific island. Mr. Smith, who will accompany the Australian through several states, says in a letter to R. J. McLean, secretary of the local commercial organization:

"Australia plans to do everything possible to promote a better feeling between the two countries and to improve our trade relations. The trip undertaken by Mr. Hunter, who, by the way, was formerly a newspaper writer at Sidney, is important in many ways."

OCTOPUS HEADS DIE YOUNG.

Worry of Standard Oil Business a "Man-Killer."

New York.—One by one the old-timers of the Standard Oil are receiving their final summons and the younger generation have not yet demonstrated their ability to successfully fill the gaps.

Seven prominent Standard Oil men have died within the last few years so that today only a few of those who were associated with John D. Rockefeller in the early stages of his career remain at the helm.

Daniel O'Day was among the first to go. H. H. Rogers, often described as "the brains of Standard Oil," died under lamentable circumstances; in financial circles it was well known that this rugged financier lost heart over the events of 1907. W. P. Howe, W. H. Tilford, F. Q. Barstow and Philip Ruprecht have all passed away, while this week James Smith, head of the manufacturing committee of the Standard Oil company, died suddenly at the age of 53.

How far overwork has been responsible for the mortality among Standard Oil officials can not be gaged, but those best acquainted with the facts believe that the strain involved has been a factor in cutting short the lives of more than one of those here enumerated.

Who will be the successors of the Standard Oil leaders removed by death and of the septuagenarians and octogenarians whose active labors are nearing an end?

Young John D. Rockefeller has no taste for business, but desires to devote his life to the philanthropic schemes evolved by his father. William Rockefeller's son, Percy, is an active, strenuous worker of recognized ability.

H. H. Rogers, Jr., is credited with possessing more than average brain power, but he has not so far convinced his associates that he is destined to adequately fill the shoes of his father.

The young Bedfords are noted for their strict attention to business and are already filling important positions in various departments. But, as already stated, the younger element have not yet won their spurs. Fortunately their training will fit them for conducting gigantic enterprises, inasmuch as they can not but realize that the age of unrestrained and unmerciful tactics has gone and that hereafter a corporation's morals must be above reproach.

SAYS JOHN McNAMARA HIRED HIM AS SPY

MUSKOGEE MAN MAKES STARTLING CONFESSION

John Delaney Admits That he Made Plans of Structures to be Destroyed With Dynamite by McNamara Forces.

Muskogee, Okla., June 5.—John Delaney, a structural iron worker has confessed to Harry Eagen, a representative of the Muskogee police, in the presence of witnesses that he had been employed by John J. McNamara secretary and treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Iron Workers of America, to travel throughout the country carefully inspecting all structures being erected by nonunion labor, securing carefully made drawings of such structures and marking the spot with a cross where dynamite could be most easily placed and would be most effective.

Delaney in his confession declared that it was his duty to forward the drawings to John J. McNamara and he did forward them. He still has a few such drawings bearing the cross-marks in his possession, with letters of instruction addressed to him and purporting to be signed by McNamara.

The following is Delaney's written confession:

Introduced to McNamara.

"I know C. E. Skidmore of Pittsburg, Pa., local No. 33. I met him the latter part of 1903. We worked together in Pittsburg, Cleveland, Philadelphia and New York and Buffalo. In the spring of 1906, Mr. Skidmore by request at Cincinnati met me and we went to Indianapolis, and there I met Mr. McNamara in the local union No. 22. Mr. Skidmore gave me this introduction to McNamara, and at this time McNamara said to me: 'You have been very highly recommended to me by Skidmore, and as you are not afraid of anything I have some work we can use you on with your expenses paid at all times, and good money besides.'

"At this time McNamara said to me that he wanted me to look up all structural iron work that was being done by nonunion labor, and find out whether it was very hard to get at these jobs or not. He promised to pay me every quarter, my salary to start from that time. I told him at this time that I would think the matter over, and then tell him more definitely later.

"I went from there to Birmingham, Ala., and I was there about four or five days, when I received a letter from McNamara asking me if I was going to turn this proposition down. If so to let him know, as he had another party that he wanted to put in. I notified him I would be back in Indianapolis as soon as this work was done that I was working on, and would take the proposition up with him.

His First Job.

"The first building I located for McNamara was in Cincinnati, an office building on Vine street, which is being erected by nonunion men. I wrote to McNamara, sending him a diagram of his office building, showing him the point where dynamite could be placed for the destruction of the building. This building was blown up by members of the structural iron workers in January of the year 1907.

"The next building I located for Mr. McNamara was the Viaduct in Chicago. That was blown up in February of the year 1907. I went from there to St. Louis and located a building on Seventh street, which was blown up at some time later by the structural iron workers' union. I went from there to Denver, reaching there the 15th day of August, 1909, and registered at the St. Joseph hotel, Ninth and Larimer streets.

"While at Denver, I received a letter from McNamara to go to Salt Lake City, and I went, arriving there the 16th day of November, 1909. I registered at the Wabash rooming house. While here I got two letters from McNamara instructing me that I would have another party make himself known to me with a letter from McNamara, whose name I have forgotten, and that this party would blow up the Utah hotel. This building was blown up on the 29th day of December at 3 a. m. At the time this building was blown up I was standing one block from it. When the explosion took place I ran toward it, thinking some one was killed. When I got close to the building I was nearly struck by a piece of iron, and began to run away, when I was taken up by a police officer, who took me before Chief of Police Harlow and Chief of Detectives George Sheets. I was tried in connection with this case and given six months in the county jail and a fine of $350. I paid $65 and the balance was remitted, and served the sentence.

Thrown Down.

"After leaving the jail I went to Houston, Texas, and there wrote to McNamara demanding my fee for the part that I had taken in these affairs. He wrote back to me, refusing to give me any aid whatever, and also advised the local secretary to take up my union card, No. 25783. Since then I have had nothing whatever to do with the union or McNamara and give this statement on my own account, that justice may be done to the offending party."

In a verbal confession, later, to Eagen, Delaney declared he was in communication with McNamara in December in regard to the Salt Lake City "job." Delaney then was in Houston.

Tom Hall, he said, blew up the bridge in Kansas City. Hall worked for him a while, he said in Austin, Texas. Oris McManical brought the letter of introduction to him from McNamara, he said, while he stayed at room 42, Wabash rooming house, Salt Lake City.

Delaney came to Muskogee two months ago. He began work as a cab driver. He worked at that just five days when he took employment as a "dynamiter" in the oil fields here. He is still working here. A representative of the William J. Burns Detective agency, who was here today, discredited Delaney's confession, according to a statement of a Muskogee police official.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

Organize Brick Company. Forest Grove, Ore.—E. Gurney and Otto Risor have incorporated the Forest Grove Brick & Tile Co., purchased the catching brick yard northwest of town, and have taken charge of the plant.

Knappton Mill Resumes. Astoria, Ore.—The Knappton saw-mill which has been closed down for several months on account of the weak condition of the market is making arrangements to resume operations about June 12, thus furnishing employment to from 60 to 75 men.

Nebraska Editors Meet. Omaha, Neb., June 5.—Editors of daily and weekly papers from all over the state are arriving in Omaha today for the annual convention of the Nebraska Press association. The program of the meeting covers three days.

Y. M. C. A. Branch at Big Eddy. The Dalles, Ore.—The Y. M. C. A. opened a branch at Big Eddy. The government construction camp near here, this week under the direction of L. A. Toothaker. The building is equipped with pool and billiard tables, music, reading and lounging rooms and other conveniences.

Oregon City Resident Very Ill. Oregon City, Ore.—Robert Goodfellow, an old resident of this city, is seriously ill at the Wilhoit Springs hotel. His daughter, Mrs. Morris, and his wife, accompanied by Dr. Morris, left yesterday in an automobile for the springs, where they will remain with Mr. Goodfellow.

New Wagon Road. Lakeview, Ore.—The new wagon road from Lake City to Davis Creek is now under construction, and when completed promises to be the best highway leading from Surprise valley to the railroad. The distance from Lake City to Davis Creek by way of the new road will be but 11 3-4 miles and the steepest grade will not exceed 10 per cent.

Fruitgrower Killed. Hood River, Ore.—Warren Wells, one of the old time settlers of Hood River and a wealthy grower, was killed in a runaway Saturday night at 10 o'clock. His team ran down a steep grade and at a turn of the road near the Hood River bridge the unfortunate man was thrown down a steep embankment of rocks. He leaves a widow and seven children.

Stenographer's Body Found. Oregon City, Ore.—Julie Maxwell, formerly a stenographer, aged about 40, was found dead yesterday morning in her cabin three miles from Welch, on the Mount Hood road. She had died from an overdose of laudanum, probably taken to lighten pain due to a heart affection. She lived alone and is said to have come originally from Portland. The body was taken to an undertaking parlor in that city, where an inquest was held by the coroner of Clackamas county.

Millers Open Big Show. Detroit, Mich., June 5.—Practical demonstrations of the various stages in the evolution of grain from the field product to the output of the bakery will mark the industrial exposition opened today in the Wayne Pavilion in connection with the annual international convention of the Fraternity of Operative Millers of America. A considerable portion of the exposition space is taken up by displays of specimens of grain shown by experimental stations of the various states of the Union and provinces of Canada.
