SMALL FARMER HAS CHANCE IN NORTHWEST

There is not another industrial opening in the Pacific Northwest for the man of small capital and a family. Like gardening, growing small fruit and in limited quantity, larger fruit, says the Portland Telegram. Especially in garden produce is the region short. High prices now prevail, because the supply is below the demand while the influx of population is much greater than the increase of production in the vegetable lines. Several reasons have contributed to the shortage. One is the indifference of the average farmer to garden work. Another is the lack of organization, which would protect the producer against commission men and wholesale produce dealers combines. Still another has been the failure of the local men to establish standards and brands, which would have a fixed market value, and to live up to these with rigid severity, like the modern fruit unions. That the soil and climate have an unsurpassed value for garden production cannot be questioned. That the market is here, with highest prices known to all the good agricultural communities, is also patent. To get a class of gardeners here who will take advantage of these favoring conditions, and bring their vegetables up to the same high state attained by the fruit men, is the work of the best promoters of community prosperity. It is this condition which makes the garden enterprise one of the most inviting opportunities to be found in the Northwest today.

PROFESSOR'S BOOK PRAISED.
Review of Reviews Says Nice Things of Prof. J. A. Bexwell's "Farm Accounting."

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, June 10.—The June Review of Reviews says some very complimentary things of the volume on "Farm Accounting and Business Methods" by Prof. J. A. Bexwell, head of the commerce school of the Oregon agricultural college, which has just been issued in a new edition. "The fact that farming is a business and must be conducted on business lines is becoming increasingly apparent in these days of scientific management," says the reviewer. "To the busy farmer, working out doors, it may be irksome to keep accounts, but some form of book keeping, however simple, must be adopted, to enable him to know just where his profit or his loss comes in, and how he stands at any particular time. "One of the most satisfactory treatises on this subject of farm accounting is by Prof. J. A. Bexwell of the Oregon agricultural college. The book is divided into four parts—financial accounts; cost accounts and special records; Business organization, correspondence and Forms; and useful Tables. Three systems of bookkeeping are explained—single entry, modified double entry and full double entry. A liberal supply of exercises and illustration lessons for each method is provided. Professor Bexwell's book is published by the Home Correspondence school of Springfield, Mass., which also issues a binder containing a complete set of forms with printed headlines for the various farm and household accounts."

FRENCH PEACE ADVOCATE DENOUNCES JAP WAR SARE

Boston.—That the great war in this country is the economic war, and that there is no foundation for any Japanese war scare, were statements of Baron D'Estournelles De Constant, the French world of peace advocate at an economic club dinner Friday night.

"The United States has so much to do in further developing her great national system that she cannot afford to waste her energies or resources in war," he said.

"War between the United States and Japan is as unthinkable as is war between the United States and Great Britain," declared Dr. L. Yenga of Japan, now lecturing at the University of Wisconsin.

FOUGHT FOR CHUM'S LIFE

Heroic Boy Wouldn't Abandon Drowning Lad Despite Resistance
Shenandoah, Pa.—While a number of boys were swimming in a Locust mountain reservoir Anthony Mercavage, 14 years old, took a cramp and was sinking for the second time when John Schetter, aged 16, went to the lad's assistance and saved him from a watery grave at great peril. He had to fight the drowning boy off until he got him by the hair, and then hauled him to safety, amid deafening cheers of many spectators.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

Shingle Mill Destroyed.
Hogulum, Wash.—The Wynochle shingle mill, at Montesano, was destroyed by fire this morning, causing a loss of $50,000. The fire originated from a hot box and was well under way before discovery. Before the fire department arrived the mill was a mass of flames. It was only by the hardest work that the dry-kilns were saved.

Sherwood to Enjoy Fourth.

Sherwood, Ore.—The Sherwood Commercial club has arranged for celebrating July 4 here on a larger scale than ever, and expects between 3000 and 4000 people. Several novel games with prizes are announced. The Newberg band has been engaged for the day, and there will be a fine display of fireworks, and dancing in the evening.

Townsite Up at Auction.

Salem, Ore.—The new townsite of St. Louis, located on the Oregon Electric 35 miles south of Portland, will be sold at auction next Wednesday. The property is owned by the Capital Trust company of this city. The townsite is near the old pioneer town of St. Louis, where the oldest Catholic church in the state still stands. The country tributary to this place is highly developed.

Blethens Attack Charge.

Seattle, Wash.—A motion to quash the indictment against Colonel A. J. Blethen, editor of the Times; Clarence B. Blethen, C. W. Wappenstein, the Times Printing company and others, charging them with conspiracy to procure the maintenance of certain gambling houses and resorts forbidden by law, was filed in the Superior Court today by counsel for the defendants, who allege illegality of the grand jury and faultiness of the indictment. The motion went over.

Centralia Road Planned.

Centralia, Wash.—Bids were opened today by the county commissioners for the building of a mile hard-surface road to cost $15,000. The road has been surveyed by County Engineer John Ward and needs improvement to be serviceable for heavy traffic. The road will commence where the state-aid road leads to from the Cowlitz to the Olympia roads, three miles southeast of Chehalis.

Salmon Are Running at Husum.

Husum, Wash.—The run of salmon comprising the steelhead, brownback and silver-sides, is attracting considerable attention when the fish attempt to leap the falls of the White Salmon river here. In order to be successful the fish must make a flying jump of 15 feet. Two bold fishermen can be seen daily at the falls with long poles and sturgeon hooks attempting to capture the salmon as they are making their leap. Many fish are landed, some measuring 30 inches.

Pioneers to Tell Story.

McMinnville, Ore.—The Yamhill County Pioneer association at its nineteenth annual meeting this week appointed a committee consisting of Judge Ramsey and Judge Galloway, both of this city, to gather data for a complete pioneer history of the county. This will embrace the period from the earliest settlement of the county by white men in the early "forties" to the present date. There are about 200 members enrolled in the Pioneer association, the majority of whom were children who accompanied their parents across the plains to Yamhill county in the early decade of Oregon's settlement, and the lack of a published record of local happenings relating to the pioneers has created the sentiment demanding that such a history be compiled.

Timbermen Form League.

Medford, Ore.—Representatives of 120,000 acres of privately owned timber lands in Jackson county, met this afternoon, and organized the Jackson County Fire Protective association under the guidance of C. A. Chapman, of Portland, and F. A. Elliott, State Forester. The association will take immediate steps to have the privately-owned timber lands of the county patrolled in order to prevent loss during the fire season. It is estimated that it will cost them about two cents an acre to properly guard the forests. Last season the loss in timber in this county was heavy, and most of the fires originated in private timber lands where no patrol was maintained as in the government reserve. This year the timber owners will co-operate with the officials of the Crater National forest and it is believed that loss will be kept at a minimum.

DEAD PIG SAVES LIVES OF PYTHON'S KEEPERS

New York.—A dead pig prevented a disaster in the reptile-house at the Bronx zoological gardens today, when Kaa, the twenty foot regal python, escaped into the runway back of his cage.

Head Keeper Charles Snyder and four men were moving Kaa with a sack over his head into a new cage. The hindmost keeper shoved Kaa's tail into his new abode, and the others pushed each armful of snake in after. Kaa was all in but his head. This was the critical moment, for when the sack was removed the snake lashed out at those who had been holding him.

As Snyder snatched the bag away the man holding the head made a desperate effort to push it into the cage, but failed. Instantly the snake flung itself outward into the three foot passage.

The keepers tried to run, but were jammed tightly together. There was every chance of the snake's getting a twist on one of the keepers and crushing out his life.

Snyder saw one chance. Ten feet away lay a box containing the body of a pig, provided for the python's next meal. Snyder snatched up the pig and threw it before the lashing head of the snake. Kaa reached for the carcass and wound his twenty feet about it, in a compact coil.

Snyder and his men leaped forward hurled a blanket over the coiled reptile, seized it, and with a mighty heave flung it into the cage and slammed the door.
