FINLEY CONSENTS TO LECTURE HERE

STATE GAME WARDEN
WILL TALK TO PEOPLE

Is Noted Speaker and Carries Slides of Birds and Animals in Their Native Haunts—Lectures Next Tuesday.

W. L. Finley, state game warden and president of the Oregon branch of the National Audubon society, will be heard in an address here next Monday or Tuesday night in the city hall and there is much pleasure expressed by sportsmen and townspeople generally over this announcement. C. K. Cranston, chairman of the state fish and game commission, this morning received a letter from the noted lover of birds, consenting to deliver an illustrated lecture on the occasion of the visit of himself and Master Fish Warden R. E. Clanton to this county for the establishment of a fish hatchery at Gibbon.

Mr. Finley expresses a preference for Monday night as the date of his lecture, but inasmuch as the local fish and game association has planned a trout banquet for that night, he will probably acquiesce in the arrangements of the committee, which has set Tuesday night as the date. This committee consists of Mark Moorhouse, William Humphrey and Frank Earnhart, and they will do all in their power to interest local people in the coming lecture.

The lecture will be free to everybody and the committee guarantees that it will be interesting. In writing to Mr. Cranston, Mr. Finley says: "I shall try to make my talk of interest to sportsmen and others, children as well as grown people. My subject will be 'The State and Its Relation to Game Protection.'" shall perhaps speak for about twenty minutes on matters of general interest as to our laws and what our commission expects to accomplish, then I shall show about 100 slides and tell of some of the game resources of the state, especially through the Klamath and Malheur country. I can show the pictures of the trip we took from The Dalles out into the Malheur country. I have always found that they are of good general interest."

The date and definite arrangements for the lecture will be announced later.

CRAZY GREEK BREAKS LOOSE FROM FRIENDS

fight last Friday. He accosted him but the fellow paid no attention whereupon Stansberry took him by the arm. Immediately the crazy Greek was aroused to action. Wheeling upon the officer he reached for his knife which he had placed in his pocket, but before he could use it, the officer's club had descended three times on his head, cutting large gashes and temporarily stunning him.

Stands Men at Bay.
John Butler ran up and the two held him while Griggs ran for a rope. But the man was not yet subdued. Suddenly wrenching loose from his captors, he drew his knife and made for Stansberry but was kept at a safe distance by the club of the officer. Then, suddenly seeing his temporary advantage, he turned and ran swiftly down the street and into the Greek house. The other Greeks had by this time returned home and they secured his knife, after which he walked quietly down town between Stansberry and Walter Wells.

He was again locked up in the county jail and it is safe to venture that, no matter how peaceable and rational his conduct, he will not again be liberated until there is positive assurance that he will be placed where he can do no harm to anyone.

Fiddle of Suicide Repaired.

Coroner Ralph Folsom is exhibiting a fiddle which he thinks will be of value as a musical instrument as well as a curiosity. It formerly belonged to John Ady, the aged man who cut his throat near Meacham a year ago last April and was found in the snow banks. It was badly broken but Conductor Jack Cherry of the motor car has proved his skill by carefully placing it together. Through the silk can be seen a drawing of the knife with which the suicide was committed and below an inscription telling the history of the instrument.

Bibulthitic Engineer Here.

Wall, one of the engineers in the employ of the Warren Construction company, arrived in the city today to assist City Engineer Kimbrell in doing the preliminary work toward preparing for the street paving which the council has voted. ### HELPED SAVE PENDLETON.

Wounded by Sioux.

In speaking of his earlier days yesterday, he told how in 1875 he and a party of his tribesmen were hunting buffalo near the mouth of the Rosebud on the Missouri river. While engaged in the hunt a party of thieving Sioux raided their camp and stole their horses. The Nez Perces gave pursuit, overtook the Sioux band and gave battle. In this fight Sunny Eye had succeeded in killing one of the Sioux when another pointed a gun at him and fired, the bullet striking him in the right shoulder and plowing through his body. In proof of this statement, the old redskin bared his arm to the shoulder and exhibited a large scar.

Fought With Chief Joseph.

After he had recovered from his wound, he says, he took his family and went into the Bitter Root valley where he left them while he made his way to the Nez Perce agency. This was in 1876, the year in which Chief Joseph was making much trouble for the whites. Sunny Eye was unaware that some of his tribesmen were on the warpath until he encountered them while en route to the agency. Chief Joseph persuaded him to join them and he fought his first and only battle against the whites along the Clearwater river. Later, when the soldiers from Fort Missoula blocked the Lolo trail and while Chief Joseph was planning to outfit the white general by attacking from the rear, Sunny Eye went to the great red chieftain, asking permission to go back to his family, telling him that he was a friend of the white man and did not want to fight against him. This permission was finally secured, although many of the redskins were for hanging him instead.

Before he had fairly started on his return trip he ran into the soldiers, was taken prisoner and held in Fort Missoula for eight months. When he was finally liberated, his family was gone, having been picked up by Chief Joseph and his party, and it was several years before he saw them again.

Helped Save Pendleton.

It was now the year 1878, the year of the famous Bannock uprising and in this war Sunny Eye was allied with the white man and was one of the scouts who captured Egan, the bloody chief of the Plutes, which capture practically ended the Bannock war and saved Pendleton from the attack which Egan had planned. This capture was engineered by Umapine, father of the present chief of the Cayuses, who was always a staunch friend of the white man. While bringing Egan into the agency on the Umatilla reservation, that wily chieftain managed to release one hand and was in the act of attacking Umapine when Five Crows, one of the scouts, stabbed him to death and his head was brought into the agency on a pole.

Sunny Eye recounted these stories

IDAHO BANDIT STILL AT LARGE

stinct of the hounds the sagacity of the scout.

Until he shall faint from fatigue before the guns of his hunters there will be no rest for the isolated ranch family or the lonely sheep herder. New crimes are expected hourly as long as the desperate man is at large.

Whitney is the "short man" of an attempted saloon holdup at Monida, Montana, on Friday. It was to avoid trial for this crime that he shot the officer who had him in custody and fatally wounded the Oregon Short line conductor who assisted the officer. The later crimes were committed in seeking liberty—McGill was shot because he had a horse the bandit needed; Scott because he was guarding a bridge, and Oley because he was a member of a pursuing posse.

Whitney met Oley about three miles east of Idaho Falls, as he doubled back on his trail. The constable was taken by surprise and before he could raise his own weapon the bandit's bullet sent him bleeding to the ground.
