The closing of congress has been set back by gossip, from July to September, because of the belief that a revision of the tariff will be taken up as well as the reciprocity agreement.

facts that reach the paramount pinnacles of dramatic art. The most beautiful of all the beautiful Vestal Virgins loves a Roman youth, both are condemned to be burned to death. They escape the infuriated pursuers through a subterranean tunnel to life and liberty.

2. "Love Proved Stronger Than Duty." Pathe, drama. This picture is well acted and interesting.

3. "Bob's Microscope." Pathe. This is an educational film full of good instruction, though not a very good advertisement for cheese nor vinegar. The film shows a good many interesting things.

4. "Bertie's Reformation." Kalem. Here is a lively comedy. It tells the story of a young man who is dazzled by the lure of the city and how he is outwitted by his father. It is a good comedy, well played.

5. "The Man from the East." Selig. Jack Manning is a young man one year out of college. His father, recently died, leaving him a fortune. And as the father was a retired banker, Jack has nothing to keep him in New York, with the exception of Elsie Dean, a rich banker's daughter. Jack is desperately in love with Elsie. He is a trained athlete—was captain of the football team at college. When he was 17 years old his father took him to spend his vacation on a cattle ranch in the west. One of the cowboys took a liking to him and taught him how to shoot, ride and throw the lariat. So at the first tiff with Elsie Jack Hikes for the west, heralded as a tenderfoot. He is given a royal reception by the cowboys, but proves that a man's courage and daring can not always be judged from the clothes he wears. Elsie and her father visit the ranch. Jack saves her from insult, culminating in a revival of their childhood love.

The Pastime.

The house of quality. Excellent program for Tuesday's change. Special feature.

"The Immortal Alamo," Melies. Historic romance between Texas and Mexico. This is one of the finest films ever turned out. The scenery is the real thing, the costumes historically correct and the acting superb. Over 500 persons in this picture, including the students of the Peacock military college. The story of the siege and fall of the Alamo is the most pathetic and intimate bit of tragedy in our national history. To see an entire garrison annihilated, only three children and two women being taken emphasizes a historical event as nothing else outside of the original contest could do. It is the story of Gen. Santa Ana's attack upon the Alamo Feb. 23, 1836, and shows how the defenders with 140 men held out until the cannon made a breach in the walls and the few remaining were overwhelmed. This picture is full of real thrills.

"A Novel Experiment," Selig Co. by J. A. Golden. This story shows how a noted novelist disguises himself as a tramp in order to study tramp life. In the course of his adventures he finds Harry Arnold, a young swell, dead drunk in the streets, takes him to his apartments. Arnold has just been rejected by his sweetheart and plans to get even with her by dressing up this tramp and having him make love to Eleanor and then disgrace the girl by exposing the tramp. One look at the girl's portrait induces the tramp to enter the game. Well they fall in love and marry. The story ends with a unique comedy scene in which Arnold is properly punished.

"The Muskateer," Urban. An enthralling photoplay of the days of Henry IV of France.

"The Sleuth." This is a trick film and it is amusing. It's hero is a fool who plays sleuth to find the trunk thieves.

The Bachelor's Old Maid." Chamption. A great comedy told in the refreshing "Champ" style. A pair of young lovers tricked the girl's uncle into giving his consent to their marriage, and entangled him in a net of Cupid's weaving from which he could not escape. It is plainly evident that there will be a double wedding in the future. A lively story, well told and well photographed. "It is to laugh."

"Susceptible Dad." Silax. Hilarious comedy. Marie wants to marry Harry, but pa says "no," so Marie has Harry don girls' clothes and visit her. Dad falls violently in love with the supposed girl and makes himself generally foolish till he finds out "where he is at." The laugh is on dad, so he surrenders.

"Their First Baby." Silax. Pa is angry at his daughter's marriage, so they decide to tell him they have a baby named for him. He is glad and decides to visit them. Jack steals a kid and an awful mixup occurs, but finally Jack confesses and all ends happily. It is all laugh.
