WILL NOT DISCARD DREADNOUGH TYPE

LONDON YARD DOUBTED BY U. S. NAVAL OFFICERS

Large Ships Found More Effective in Battle and England Will Need Many.

New York, July 10.—Naval officers stationed at the Brooklyn navy yards are inclined to doubt the London dispatch in which was predicted the passing of the dreadnaught type of battleship in favor of smaller vessels of equally heavy armament. In their opinion Great Britain and the other nations of the world will even enlarge the size of the present day battleships.

Rear Admiral E. N. C. Leutz, U. S. N., retired, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yards, said: "It is hard to believe England's future navy policy is to be toward the reduction in the size of its war vessels. We have found the dreadnaught the most effective fighting machines yet produced and consequently we will continue to make our vessels in greater size."

Dreadnaughts Are Necessary. Naval Constructor Robert E. Stocker, U. S. N., who has been sent to the Brooklyn navy yards to lay the hull of the battleship New York, could not reconcile his experience in ship building with the report from

London. "We need all the dreadnaughts we can get," he asserted. "In the dreadnaught has been found a type which is an improvement over everything built before."

"The qualities of speed, gun strength and endurance cannot be contained in a bulk smaller than at present incloses them. Our engines give a maximum of power with a minimum of space; our guns are included in the narrowest expanse with possible safety. If we want greater speed and secure it in the size of the vessel, the armament must be sacrificed to a corresponding extent. Inversely if we are to increase the armament of our dreadnaughts, on a smaller vessel, we would have to dispense with some of our speed."

Space Needed for Engines. Captain G. E. Burd, U. S. N., in charge of the machinery department of the navy yard, said it is not possible with the present engines to economize in space without losing elsewhere.

PREPARING FOR RE-GRADING CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Spokane, Wash. — Construction firms in Spokane holding the sub-contracts to build 132 1-2 miles of a total of 162 miles of grade for the Canadian Northern Railway company, announce they will have between 6,000 and 7000 men at work on the line between Hope and Kamloops, B. C., within 45 days. The original contract, which was awarded to Patrick Welch of Spokane, involves a total expenditure of more than $15,000,000 and is to be completed in two years. The local builders already are assembling their outfits with a view to establishing camps at points along the survey before the beginning of August. The work is said to be the heaviest since the construction of the Canadian Pacific line through the Rockies and the Selkirks. More than 80 miles of grade will be blown out of solid rock on the steep banks and narrow canyon, along the Fraser river, and three miles of tunnels will be driven, two of them being from 2000 to 2200 feet in length.

Most of the camps will be established along the line of the Canadian Pacific railroad.

WOULD PAY FOR APPLES STOLEN MANY YEARS AGO

Hooster Farmer Conscience Smitten by Awful Deed Committed When a Boy.

Bloomington, Ill.—J. H. Ryker of Madison, Ind., a former resident of this city, is determined to die with a clear conscience. He has begun to make reparation for any sins which he may have committed, and says he will succeed at any cost.

Ryker's determination to purge his conscience came several weeks ago, while attending a revival meeting. He had always been considered by his friends here and in Madison, Ind., as a godly man, and had attended church regularly; but the revivalist added much to his religious fervor and instilled into his mind with particular force the commandment: "Thou shalt not steal."

And then came another awakening. Filled with renewed religious ardor and a desire to spread good among his fellow men, he proceeded to preach an impromptu sermon to a small boy, whom he caught hunting for ripe fruit in his strawberry patch. Ryker nabbed the little red-headed fellow and, as he held him by the nape of the neck, talked to him on the text:

"Thou shalt not steal."

"Aw, didn't youse ever steal anything when youse was a kid?" replied the boy, unabashed.

Ryker was dumfounded. He had stolen. As he recalled his own boyhood life, he realized that once he had stolen a three-mile ride on a railroad train. On another occasion he stole an apple from a grocery man.

As he pondered over these boyhood crimes he forgot his sermon to the red-headed lad, who made his escape with a cup full of strawberries.

Then Ryker set out to make reparation for his boyhood crimes.

He figured out that the stolen railroad ride would have cost at least 10 cents. To make certain that the railroad should not lose any money on its investment, he sent 50 cents to the long suffering corporation.

Then he came to Bloomington to hunt for the grocer, from whom he stole the apple twenty-five years ago. The man had left town, but Ryker determined to square his conscience, so he has begun advertising throughout Central Illinois for the grocer. He is determined to pay him for the apple.

CHAUFFEUR ATTACKS BRIDE

He Will Not Hurt Anybody in the Next Six Months.

New York, July 10.—Mrs. Viola Stern of 2649 Eighth avenue, a bride of two months, dropped her engagement ring in the grass in St. Nicholas park and was searching for it when a man she had never seen before approached and asked if he might aid her. She told him about the ring and for nearly an hour they looked in vain in the grass.

"You needn't bother to stay," the man at length told her. "I'll continue to look, and if I find it I'll bring it to you. My name is James A. Dolph. I'm a chauffeur and I live at 2376 Old Broadway."

Mrs. Stern thanked him and gave her name and address. Then she started to leave, but hadn't gone far before she found the ring. She turned back to tell Dolph, but he had gone.

Shortly after Mrs. Stern had finished her breakfast today Adolph called. She admitted him to the apartment and told him she had found the ring, whereupon, she says, he seized her by the throat and threw her to the floor. She struggled and screamed, and Mrs. Ida Ternum, who lives across the hall, came to her rescue. The two women were too much for Adolph. He ran out of the building and along Eighth avenue, yelling "Fire!"

At One Hundred and Fortieth street Adolph was stopped by Policeman Winterhalter of the West One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth street station. He compelled the chauffeur to go back with him to 2649 Eighth avenue and a charge was made against him by Mrs. Stern.

In the Harlem police court Adolph was found guilty of disorderly conduct and sentenced to six months on the island.

GIRL BLOWN INTO RIVER

Caught by High Wind While Bathing and Drowned.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Two deaths, the wrecking of five motor boats on the Ohio river and a narrow escape from destruction of the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati packet Queen City were caused by a severe storm that broke over this city.

Dorothy Maxwell, aged 13, while bathing, was blown out into mid-stream by the wind and drowned before help could reach her.

On the Ohio side of the river, near Bridgeport, Fred Young, a mill worker, was feeding his pigs, when a small run overflowed almost in an instant and carried Young and his pigs in a torrent down the hillside into Bridgeport, where they were lodged under a stone culvert. Young was dead when his body was found, but the pigs were alive.

FIRE CHANCES LESSENED.

Late Rains Thoroughly Soaked Forest Throughout State.

Portland, Ore.—Reports received at the offices of the forest service, state forester and Oregon Forest fire association covering all parts of the state show that the recent rains have not only extinguished forest fires which have been burning, but have materially lessened the chances of other fires starting for the next few days. While no serious fires have occurred this season, the June dry spell resulted in a number of fires becoming started in slashings, fern patches and old burns which were difficult to completely extinguish and were being watched to prevent their spreading. The recent rains have made it possible to take no further account of these fires.

Patrolmen Stationed. Patrolmen employed by the forest service, private timber owners and Oregon Forest Fire association are now stationed in all parts of the state, although the full force will not go into the field until the middle of July.

Already 250 fire wardens have been given state appointments as provided by law. These men while receiving no compensation from the state are responsible to the United States forester for enforcing the fire laws, are authorized to issue burning permits and, if necessary, arrest those guilty of setting off fires.

It is safe to say that not less than 500 men will be actively engaged in patrolling Oregon's timbered area the coming summer.

The state forester has appointed twenty supervising wardens who are under state pay and devote their entire time to suppression of fires and enforcement of fire laws. The counties in which these men are located are: Benton, Clatsop, Clackamas, Columbia, Coos, Crook, Douglas, Jackson, Klamath, Lake, Lincoln, Linn, Marion, Multnomah, Polk, Tillamook, Union, Wallowa, Washington, Wheeler and western Grant, Yamhill, Baker, Harney, Malheur and eastern Grant.

Wardens Also Referees.

These wardens will issue permits where there is no local fire warden available, act as referee in case of any dispute over the advisability of issuing permits and keep in touch with the volunteer fire wardens.

In addition to this they will frequently inspect locomotives and logging engines burning fuel other than oil and see that proper spark arrestors are maintained as well as make sure that old slashings are kept in the safest possible condition.

Copies of the law and other fire literature is being freely distributed in the state by the government, state and private interests seeking to reduce the fire damage. This, together with a better public sentiment in favor of suppression of fires should result in their being far less frequent and damaging this summer than during previous years.

WATER DISPUTE LEADS TO KILLING

St. Anthony, Idaho, July 10.—J. S. Neil was shot and killed at Darby in Teton basin, by Ellington Smith. Both men are farmers and the killing is the result of a row over the right to water in an irrigation ditch, although a bitter feud has existed between the two men for a number of years.

The shooting was a severe shock to the community as both men were of a quiet and retiring nature, neither showing anything of a quarrelsome disposition and both held the confidence and respect of their neighbors.

Smith fired but one shot, killing Neil instantly.

That there is more than the water right trouble behind the tragedy was indicated when Smith was interviewed after being brought to St. Anthony by Deputy Sheriff Pickett. The prisoner said: "When it is time for me to speak I will show that I had just provocation for what I have done. Further than that I have nothing to say at present."

ANNA GOULD'S SON IS RIGHTFUL HEIR

De Sagan Loses Suit to Bar Child from German Inheritance.

Berlin.—Prince Heike de Sagan, Anna Gould's husband, just lost a long-fought suit in the German courts whereby he sought to set aside the right of his 2-year-old son, Prince Charles Jason Howard, to inherit the De Sagan family's estate in this country.

Prince De Sagan set up the contention that as his son was born in France the boy is not eligible to inherit the estate, hoping thereby to make it impossible for his German creditors to attach the revenues of the estate.

The courts have decided that the baby prince is the legal heir to the properties, and the revenues may be seized to satisfy Prince Heike's debts.
