STORIES AND ESCAPES

New York.-John Kelly and his wife, living at 132 Eighth street, Brooklyn, got a shock that they will never forget. Hearing urgent knocking at their door, they opened it to find an ambulance surgeon there with their 13-months-old baby in his arms. The little boy's head was bleeding from cuts and scratches.

Little James, who is precoclously active for his age, had awakened at daylight, crawled out of his crib, crept to an open window and fallen through the fire escape to the ground, four stories below, The baby landed on a pile of garbage, which accounts for his not being killed outright. The janitor heard the infant's cry and sent for an ambulance. The surgeon found that the baby had escaped serious injury. The baby crowed and laughed in glee when placed in his father's arms. His mother had fainted,
