NERVES KILL LADY GIRAFFE. Fireworks and Thunderstorms Scare $6000 Curiosity to Death.

Cincinnati.—"Daisy," a female giraffe, said to be the most beautiful in the country and valued at $6000, died at the Cincinnati Zoological Garden from nervous prostration. A fireworks display on the Fourth of July made the giraffe ill and daily thunderstorms since then frightened it so much that it collapsed and could not be revived after a storm yesterday. The giraffe was noted as being the mother of two baby giraffes, the last of which is still living.

COWBOY CLAIMS TO BE ROUND-UP CHAMPION

BRONCHO BUSTER TELLS TALES TO BOSTON FOLK
Tries to Break "Outlaw" in City of Beans and is Badly Hurt—Lying in Hospital he Tells a Few Lies.

The Round-Up is getting good advertisement in far away Boston from a cowboy who professes to have won the steer roping contest and the broncho busting contest here last year. He has just succeeded in getting the "daylight" kicked out of him by a horse he was trying to break and that accident may be responsible for his inaccurate statements.

The following story is clipped from the Boston Post of last Friday: Bert Manz, for whom roping a mustang or "busting" a bad horse is a mere before-breakfast pastime when he is at home on the big Montana ranch, yesterday afternoon was nearly kicked into the other world by a wild horse on whom he was trying to put a bridle for the first time at the Brighton stock yards.

Manz Knocked Over. Manz says someone hit the outlaw on the tail with a hat just at the ticklish moment when he had slackened the "rope" and was trying to force the jaw breaker bit between the horse's teeth. Anyway, the big bay knocked Manz over with its forefeet, then lashed out with its rear hoofs, cut the man's cheek open and nearly kicked his left eye out. After this the horse turned around again and walked across Manz twice.

By the time the other horsemen had driven the bay outlaw into a corner of the corral away from his victim, Manz was unconscious and bleeding. Somebody telephoned for an ambulance. When it arrived and the officers started to pick up the apparently dead man, he suddenly sat up and wanted to know what had happened. A policeman told him. Then he protested against going to the hospital.

"You hold that horse a minute while I put the saddle on him," said Manz. "I'm going to ride him to the sawbones or I stay here, and that goes."

Taken to Hospital. The policeman looked once at the wicked outlaw horse and asked to be excused. Finally the officers laid strong hands upon the ranchman and carried him off to be "mended." As soon as his face had been sewed up and his eye put back into place and his bruised and dislocated shoulder strapped in place, and the numerous abrasions and lacerations all over his body attended to, Manz insisted on having his clothes put back on so he could leave the hospital.

The ranchman hustled back to the stock yards, and nearly cried when his boss refused to allow him to "break" the horse that had smashed him up. "Wait till tomorrow," ordered the boss. "The horse is tired and nervous now and you are not going to take chances of hurting him."

One hundred wild horses which have never felt bridle nor saddle arrived at the stock yards a few days ago. Manz and the other "cowboys" were sent along to "break" them.

Manz told a reporter last night he won the championship of the West last fall by "roping" and tying a steer in the contest at Pendleton, Ore., in 13 seconds. He said he also won the riding championship by staying on

RUNAWAY WIFE ARRESTED.

Iowa's New Desertion Law Applies Equally to Man and Woman. Davenport, Iowa.—The first local case of woman being arrested under the Iowa law for deserting her husband arose when Mrs. A. Zodorholm of Ottumwa was held by the Davenport police, charged with having left her spouse. The husband and the Ottumwa chief of police came after her. She was on her way to Rock Island to join her mother.

Gera-Laden Monk Roams. New York.—The entire police force of Manhattan, reinforced by an army of school children, searched for two germ-laden monkeys which escaped from the Willard Parker hospital.

The little animals are reeking with scarlet fever germs, with which they were inoculated for observation purposes. The police were instructed to find and destroy the simians at any cost. It is feared that they have been adopted as pets by well-meaning persons who found them. One of the monkeys was caught, but the other is still at large.

Kicks Off Pumps at Ball. Philadelphia.—Refusing to take a dare, the Marchese Max Strozzi of Florence, Italy, who is spending the summer at the Devon Inn, kicked off his tight patent leather pumps and waltzed with a pretty young debutante in his stocking feet. Then declaring that the soles of his feet were almost burned to a crisp by the reaction over the polished floor, he resumed his pumps and continued for the remainder of the evening.
