of the beast, which proved to be a yearling heifer.

BURGLAR SELLS PIES POCKETS CASH, DISAPPEARS

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Police of this section are searching for a daring burglar, who yesterday forced an entrance into a closed bakery shop at Nesquehanna near here, opened the store and sold bread, cakes and pies at reduced prices until he had sold out most of the stock. The store was that of W. C. Heckman, who with his family had gone to Beach Haven to see relatives.

The burglar during the morning got in through a side window, boldly opened the store, and when customers came offered them such bargains in cakes, pies and candies that soon he was doing a brisk business.

When the small stock was almost sold out he closed the store, pocketed the money he had taken in and disappeared. He is still at large.

BOYS' ARRIVAL CHEERS TOWN.

Heavy Percentage of Girls. Reduced by Three Lads Appearing.

Harrison, N. Y.—A general air of happiness is apparent in this town as the result of the birth of three boy babies during the past twenty-four hours.

In the last two years only three boys have been born, while more than eighty girls have been brought by the stork.

The village had been getting nervous over the great outnumbering of the strong sex in the birth rate, but with three boys almost in a bunch there is less apprehension.

ALBEE MAN WHERE COOL BREEZES BLOW

Camp Mars, Ore. July 22, 1911.

Editor East Oregonian:
Again I am encamped at Camp Mars, having left Albee Tuesday the 11th instant in company with A. J. Paul. We arrived here Wednesday evening. Thursday morning Mr. Paul departed for Porcupine ranger station to resume his work for Uncle Sam and I went out to Sumpter to get two men to work in our mines. Back to Camp Friday. Saturday we erected our tent and made camp as near home-like as possible under existing circumstances. Monday morning we started work in the tunnel on Saturn, which is progressing very satisfactorily. George Hofer is working for the government near Baker City while my other partners, Paul and Wright are building a government trail from Porcupine ranger station to the North Powder lakes near our camp, which they expect to complete about September 1. The weather is ideal here, with plenty of fresh air and beautiful mountain scenery. One need not get lonesome as the mosquitoes are numerous and very energetic. If any of my friends wish to "get up in the world" I would advise them to come here. In a few minutes walk from my camp I can take them to an elevation of more than eight thousand feet. They can also have the pleasure of coasting down a snow drift if they wish, as there are a number of them near by, some of them 10 feet deep.

A surveying party has been here surveying with the intention of damming the North Powder lake for irrigation purposes in the Powder river valley. They also purpose putting in another dam which will make quite a reservoir within a quarter of our camp. We expect to be here six or eight weeks yet. Want to get out in time for the Round-Up.

AT THE PICTURE SHOWS

The Orpheum.
Excellent program for Tuesday's change.

1. "The Honor of the Flag." Melies. A story of Uncle Sam's troops in Texas during the recent disturbances. The army is encamped not far from the home of the heroine of the story and soldiers ride to the rescue when it is attacked by a band of Mexican ruffians who claim to be insurgents. The story is well told out and is exciting.

2. "The Hidden Mine." Essanay. Fate seems unusually cruel at times when trying to drive us into better fortunes. So it was with William Hart, a prospector in the west, who with his wife and child sought vainly for gold day after day, while hope waned and starvation faced them. One night he is deceived from the cabin and Indians set fire to it. Mrs. Hart and her baby barely escape with their lives when Hart comes and finds them shivering beside the ruins of their home in their night robes. He begins stirring about the ashes for metal ware which has not been destroyed and finds a small nugget of gold and a valuable streak of pay dirt.

3. "The Jollier." Kalem. A lively comedy giving the adventures of a youth who sought to get through the world by jollying people. Laugh and the world laughs with you. See this picture and laugh with the world.

4. "The Oppressor." Kosmik. A drama from the life of a prince of Moravia. He is deaf on the right side and blind on the left. Appeals which to him are distasteful are attended to by his deaf side and sights which are miserable are shown on his left. His daughter, her lover and two of his ministers however, help the applicants. When he learns of their charity they are condemned to punishment. The ministers are beheaded and the daughter and her lover are sent to prison. The prince is haunted daily by spirits of his victims and finally falls dead. This brings about the release of the princess and her faithful lover. They are married and a peaceful and happy reign begins.

5. "Jimmy, the Fox." Gaumont. Is sitting at the waterside and just behind him a fishwife is roughly abusing a gendarme. The youngster is thoroughly enjoying the official's roasting, but when turned to by that person to give evidence as a witness, the little fellow affects total deafness. He is tried in many ways by the gendarme, who fails to trap the artful lad. Finally, the boy is taken to his mother and Jimmie then confessed to her how he has deceived the official—who goes defeated.

The Pastime.

Program for Tuesday's Change includes a snappy comedy, a genuine western and a high class drama.

"The Crusaders." Edison Here is a film which embodies the romance which surrounds the Crusaders. With it is interwoven a tender love story, for each Crusader as he left England carried with him some token presented by her he loved. The film is picturesque and brings back the age of chivalry. We see the onset in the Holy Land the wounding of the lover and his rival's interception of the message sent home. Eleanor waits, but the rival only returns with news of her lover's death. At last she consents to marry him, but on the wedding day the slave arrives, bringing her knot of ribbon and the message that her lover lives. This story is spirited and well acted.

"The Kiss of Mary Jane." Melies. A stirring western drama with sentiment and heart interest involved. Mary Jane kisses a horse thief about to be lynched, which so electrifies him that he escapes to become a better man.

"The Reporter." Selig. This farce is full of amusing situations. It might pass for a reporter's bad dream. The star man on the paper is sent by his editor to write up how it feels to be a burglar. The result is very funny. "Scenes in Our Navy." Selig. Showing an assemblage of the great Dogs of War, preparatory and in spectacular maneuvers, a subject that should be of absorbing interest to any American citizen whose heart pulsates with the resounding strains of "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

"The Snare of the City." Essanay. A vivid and heart-touching drama showing the snare and pitfalls for the country girl who seeks to make a living in the city. Simple, natural acting makes this story of farm house and city life a very commendable film.

The Cosy.

A very attractive program of pathos, western drama and good, laughable comedy for Monday and Tuesday.

"The Little Leader." Imp. The aged musician has composed a famous opera from starvation. On the night the opera is presented the old man, who is to lead the orchestra, suddenly falls dead. The manager is in despair as the curtain is about to be rung up and failure means ruin. The boy tells the manager that he will conduct the opera and with breaking heart the little lad wields the baton and directs the great orchestra. The opera is a grand success and the boy is adopted by the manager.

"The Savage." Nestor. The girl saved the Indian from death, and later when the Indians went on the war-path he was able to return the favor.

This is a very exciting story filled with genuine western dash.

"A Sure Cure." Nestor. Good comedy. The girl wanted to marry the young doctor so she fixed some medicine for her dad and told him he was poisoned. The village doctors being in the plot, told the victim he was in, but the young doctor affected a wonderful "cure" and won the girl. "The Pillars of Society." Thambousser. Johan leaves his native country and goes to America, making himself a fugitive to shield his friend, who takes his place in society and is greatly honored. But in after years Johan falls in love and asks his friend to clear his name, which he refuses to do. How a little child was the means of bringing the false friend to acknowledge his guilt to the world is a fitting end to a splendidly told story.

"The Dude Cowboy." Bison. A great western comedy. Cholly bothers Eva with unwelcome attentions so the cowboys dress up a negro and a chinaman in Eva's clothes and they being heavily veiled, he doesn't realize his error till he gets badly loked by both. The cowboys finally run him off the ranch.

Shot; Runs Miles to Phone.
Washuena, Wash.—Lester Chamberlain, age 16, accidentally shot himself through the left forearm with a 22-caliber rifle. The accident occurred at the home of Max Sitten, a rancher living east of town. There are telephone connections from this place to Washuena, but young Chamberlain ran two miles to the home of a neighbor to telephone his father here. The wound is not serious.
