In speaking of the baby which Beulah Binford claims is his child. Beattle said that he did not believe that he was the father of the child, but was forced to give the woman money at various times.

That he had broken off relations with Beulah Binford early in 1508, but later resumed them, without the knowledge of his wife, was frankly admitted by Beattie. He declared though that he loyed his wife with true devotion.

The "Dear Rid" letter and other missives which he wrote to Beulah Binford, he characterized as you give a woman of that kind. He declared that he could not love a woman that he could not respect and ing a height of 13,845 feet above the that he certainly could not respect
