HER WRESTLING SAVES GIRL.

Home Training Enables Child to Overcome Assault.
 Newark, N. J.—From a line of ten men, Emma Hess, 12 years old, picked John Norton, of Belleville, as the man she accused of attacking her near the Erie Railroad Riverside avenue crossing. On this identification Norton was held for the grand jury in bail of $5000 by Acting Judge Oelring. Physical culture practiced at her home prevented the girl from being seriously injured.
 "I can throw my brother wrestling," Emma told Captain Brown when he asked her how she could get away from a man the size of Norton. "When he stooped down to catch my feet and throw me to the ground I jumped over his back and ran away from him," the girl related.
 Continuing she told that Norton had thrown her up in the air, struck her in the side and tried to choke her, but she said she broke all his holds and was able to outwit him. Her stories of her athletic prowess were corroborated by her mother.
 LOCAL OPTION HITS GINGER.
 Court Puts It in Drink Class and Bans Sales as Such.
 Georgetown, Del.—Hereafter the thirsty stranger in Sussex county must complain of violent pains in his stomach and declare that he is "mighty" sick before he can purchase any Jamaica ginger from drug stores or groceries, according to a decision by Judges Rice and Wooley, sitting at Georgetown.
 The decision was given in the case of Levin Hastings of Delmar, who has eight separate and distinct indictments hanging over him for the sale of ginger. According to the argument of his counsel ginger was a drug and did not come as a medicine but as a beverage, the sale of ginger was unlawful.
 A number of the merchants got together and decided to appeal the case which had been brought as a test case by Deputy Attorney General Frank M. Jones of Georgetown, as the United States put no revenue tax on ginger.
 SLAMS WINDOW ON ROBBER.
 Woman Bravely Circumvents Bold Burglar.
 Altoona, Pa.—While alone in the house Mrs. Sarah E. Carver, aged 75, bravely frustrated a burglar's bold attempt at robbery. She heard the marauder trying to effect an entrance and, leaving her bed, she hurried to the bathroom just as the window was being raised. She slammed it down and held it, resisting all efforts to open it. The man on the other side tried to frighten her away, but she called for help and he fled.

CUTTING OUT "SILLY" HYMNS.

Minnesota Pastor Says Psalms Beat Jingles of Moody-Sankey Style
 Minneapolis, Minn.—Some of the modern hymns sung mainly in Sunday schools are being eliminated in a revision of song books used in the church today, according to Dr. Andrew Gilles, a prominent figure in the deliberations of the Northern Minnesota conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session in Minneapolis.
 Commenting on the statement of Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey that "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" is "silly," Dr. Gilles said: "Governor Wilson's criticism is an expression of the general trend toward greater discrimination in the choice of hymns—a return to the grand hymns, which combine inspiring poetry and moving music after a season of popularity of the jingles of the Moody and Sankey popular music types."

WHERE LINCOLN SAW BATTLE.

Monument to Mark Site of Old Fort Stevens, Near Capital.
 Washington, D. C.—Old Fort Stevens, one of the line of breastworks thrown up about three miles from Washington at a crisis in the Civil war, is to be marked by a monument.
 On the site from which President Lincoln viewed the defeat of General Early's attempt to capture Washington in 1864, a boulder monument, a stand about nine feet high and to be capped by a five-ton stone, will be erected within a few months.
 In the face of protests from his cabinet, President Lincoln went to the fort to witness the conflict. At the time General Early's forces were so near the capital that an ordinary field gun of today would have cast shells into the White House yard. The president became the target of Early's sharpshooters and a surgeon standing near him was shot, but Lincoln refused to quit the fort until the federal forces had won.

TROOPS BALK LYNCHING OF INDIAN SUSPECTED OF MURDER.

Girl Found in Woods With Throat Cut Is Believed to Have Been Slain by Cherokee Who Is Lodged in Jail.
 Asheville, N. C.—Saved from a mob bent on lynching and which was dispersed only when the Waynesboro militia had been called out, Ross French, a Cherokee Indian living on the Birdtown reservation near here, was lodged in jail. French is charged with killing Ethel Schuyler, 14 years old, after attempting to criminally assault her. The police say he made a partial confession. The body of the girl was found in the woods with her throat cut. No trace of her assailant was found. French was arrested on the strength of bloodstained finger prints on his hat.

GOLDEN SLUGS IN WOUNDS.

Yaqui Indians Used Precious Metal in Bullets, Travelers Say.
 San Francisco.—Bullets of solid gold were used by the Yaqui Indians in the battle they had with Diaz forces during the recent revolution, according to reports brought to San Francisco with the arrival of the steamer Curacao from Mexican ports. When wounded soldiers of Diaz were operated upon after the battle in Mazatlan hospital, passengers on the Curacao said, many of the golden slugs were found.

Backgammon was invented by Palamedes, of Greece, in 1224 B. C.
