FOWLS HEED DINNER BELL.

Poultryman Finds Way to Save His Lung at Feeding Time.
 Beverly, N. J.—Howard Wills, an extensive poultry grower of Willingboro, near here, has adopted a novel plan to call his fowls to meals, that of ringing a dinner bell. No matter where they may be on the extensive field, the chickens will fly toward him at the sound of the bell. Benjamin Atkinson, of Burlington township, summons his birds by pounding on a triangle and both men find their plans very saving of lung power.

Unimpeachable—If you were to see the unequalled volume of unimpeachable testimony in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, you would upbraid yourself for so long delaying to take this effective medicine for that blood disease from which you are suffering.

OFFICER'S POCKET PICKED IN PRISON

While He Searches 81 Men Under Arrest, One Steals His Watch.
 Seattle, Wash.—Down at police headquarters there is a deeply charmed person. Likewise, there are 100 or more patrolmen and sergeants whose countenances are decidedly illuminated when they pass the booking desk at headquarters. It all happens through the deft fingers of one of the 81 prisoners, haled before the wicket the other day to be searched before being locked up.
 John Peter Schilling, first grade patrolman, distinguished linguist, former schoolteacher, assigned to duty as booking officer, is the victim. So engrossed was he in going about his task of "frisking" the big batch of prisoners that he did not think about himself. Several hours after he completed the job he became curious as to the time of day, and reached for his watch. He discovered that some one of the 81 prisoners had "touched" him for his watch. A second search of the prisoners failed to disclose the identity of the person who "picked" his timepiece, or its whereabouts.
 Between watching the pwn shops and mourning his loss, Peter keeps his eye on a young Ingersoll which he keeps chained to his belt. Meanwhile Peter's brother officers are buying a series of hearty laughs at his expense.

AT THE COSY.

For Friday and Saturday we present a program of thrills and excitement, pathos and good comedy.
 "Science." Imp. A touching story, with Lassie, a beautiful Scotch Collie as the chief actress. The doctors while experimenting on Lassie's pup, accidentally killed it, and we see a piece of animal acting so clever as to seem human. In the closing scene the little dog comes to the grave of her lost puppy and placing her paws on it, as in prayer grieves over her dead as a human mother might do.
 "The Red Man's Penalty." Bison. The Indians, protesting against the food furnished by the government are angered at the commissioner's treatment and he and his guards are killed. The troops go in pursuit of the Indians and a great running battle is fought in which the redmen are defeated.
 "Silver Tall and His Squaw." Powers. The feature of this film is the binding of a squaw to her horse, which is sent tearing through the woods. The girl is rescued in a thrilling way by her lover. A very stirring story.
 "The Cripple." Lux A cripple girl, working in an office is made love to by a young clerk. The other clerks, finding a letter from the lover's sister asking him to meet her, decide to annoy the cripple by showing her the letter and telling her that her lover is untrue. The ill-natured plot succeeds for a time but later she learns the truth and is happy again.
 "Bill Wishes to Make Butcher." Imp. The funny little comedian Bill appears in the plot of fun as a would-be dairyman. What he didn't know about cows—well anyway he took the cow into the parlor and filled the room with milk. His churning efforts were so strenuous that he knocked a hole in the floor and flooded the house with milk, butter and cow. A gag of merriment.
 "Won By a Foot." Imp. A clever comedy in which only feet appear. In this we have the "hobo," policeman, lovers, mashers, all shown by foot work. There is a genuine surprise at the end.

USED DOG AS A NAPKIN.

Former Chorus Girl Tells of Husband's Cruel Acts in Divorce Complaint.

New York—Evelyn Martine, one of the bonniest chorus girls that ever oiled an evening suit across the footlights, though that was ten years ago, has begun suit in the supreme court for "limited emancipation" from her husband, Albert Girard, who, according to the complaint, is a man of fearful and fanatical whims.
 The former Miss Martine has chosen for golden text, "extreme cruelty." Under this general caption she declares that Girard has a particularly playful habit of whistling for her terrier at dinner and using it for a napkin instead of the table linen provided for the occasion.
 The one-time Miss Martine asks for $200 a week alimony and $5000 counsel fees. Once separated from her husband, Miss Martine says she will return to the quiet and begin all over again.

Strangled by Dumb Waiter.
 San Francisco, Oct. 12—Miss Eva Forthingham, aged 19 years, was strangled here last night by an automatic dumb waiter.

The young woman was removing dishes from the lift when it shot upward, pinning her head against the wall. She was alone in the apartment at the time and was dead when discovered by her sister. It required 20 minutes for workmen to chop through the work and release the body.

Some people learn to do by being done.
