THE NEW BOSTON STORE PENDLETON, OREGON

AT THE OREGON THEATRE

The seat sale for "The Girl, the Man and the Game" opened at the Pendleton drug store today. This new attraction which is called a musical fantasy in two frolics, comes highly recommended as a laugh provoker, and it is said that it affords Billy (Single) Clifford the best opportunity of a most successful career for high fun making. Mr. Clifford has a dozen new and popular songs and the attractions is right down to the minute in every particular. Mr. Clifford has appeared here for the past three seasons, having given us one of the big musical hits of 1909, "The Girl at the Helm." Owing to the greater seating capacity of the remodeled theatre the local manager has arranged to put the seats on the entire lower floor at $1. Last three rows balcony 75c, and gallery 50c.

This is the first time Clifford has ever played at these prices and will no doubt play to capacity business on Wednesday, Oct. 18.

YEP, IT'S HERE AT LAST. TALKING HEN ARRIVES

Parrot and Biddy Are Crossed and Result is a Powl That Says Words. Stockton--W. H. McKay, poultry breeder and secretary of the San Joaquin Poultry association, has been quietly working for some time on a breed of hen that will probably make him a fortune.

After extensive studies along the lines of atavism, McKay says he conceived the notion that by inter-breeding parrots and black Orpingtons he could get the much desired green tinge for the Orpington feathers. The results were astounding.

To poultrymen the parrot is known as a negative breeder--that is, its characteristics are not likely to be imparted by inter-breeding. However, McKay figured that with such a pronounced characteristic as green in the matter of plumage, there was some hope of success if he could secure the fertile eggs. He says he was successful in this after repeated experiments. There were many failures however, and a number of discouraging setbacks, but he kept at work until he not only secured the desired green tinge for his black Orpingtons, but he is now quite certain that he will soon show a breed of chickens that can talk.

CIVILIANS FOR THE ARMY.

President Taft Raises the Bars Making This Possible.

Washington--President Taft has broken down the bars that formerly made almost impossible appointments to commissioned positions in the army. It has been the feature of his administration, so far as the army is concerned.

Up till about two years ago it was unusual for a civilian to get an appointment as second lieutenant in the army. Examinations for second lieutenants in the cavalry, field artillery and infantry will be held at several military posts throughout the country. Each year similar examinations are to be held at regular intervals. The candidates must be of good moral character, citizens, and between 21 and 27 years of age.

The army is in need of second lieutenants. West Point military academy and the seminimilitary schools can not turn them out sufficiently fast. The facilities at West Point have been doubled only since the army numbered 8000 men. It now numbers nearly 100,000. West Point is up to 50 of her quota, a higher average attendance than in many years. There is no difficulty in getting applicants for West Point appointments.

CARNEGIE ALL ANXIETY TO TALK AT STEEL QUIZ

Ironmaster Sails for Home, Saying He Wants to Testify as Soon as Possible.

London--Andrew Carnegie sailed on the Celtic more robust in health than he has been for several years as a result of his five months' stay at Skibo Castle, his Highland home.

He said he was anxious to get back to the United States and wants to be called before the steel investigating committee as soon as he arrives.

He also issued an ultimatum to King George relative to the oath of fealty he took last week when he was tendered the freedom of the city of St. Albans. He said: "Yes, it is correct that I swore to be faithful to George the Fifth, which is one of the old English customs used when a person is tendered the keys of a city."

"But George must give me a fair trial. He must obey what I say as well as have me obey him, for I, too, am a king in my own country. I mean that all Americans are kings at home."

The iron master spoke sorrowfully of Italy declaring war. Asked about the hero fund of $1,250,000 he recently gave Italy he said he did not regret it.

ORDERED TO CHASTISE SON.

Hoosier Parent Must Carry Out Sentence of Judge.

Wabash, Ind.--When Bryce Sage appeared in police court here he received one of the most remarkable sentences ever imposed by City Judge Wilson. The youth was charged with public intoxication and entered a plea of guilty. He also stated that he was 20 years old. After having disposed of other cases the judge wrote the young man's father a note directing the son to give it to him, instructing an officer to see that the epistle fell into the proper hands. The prisoner's father was ordered to give his erring offspring a sound thrashing. "And that order must be observed," said the court.

Rockefeller is completely bald, but will soon have a lot of heirs.
