With the bride the daughter of one of the most honored and respected families of Pendleton and the groom one of the most prominent members of the younger business generation of the city and with both popular society folk, the wedding of Miss Bertha Pauline Alexander to Henry W. Collins on Tuesday evening was one of the most notable nuptials solemnized here in recent years. Not only was it notable because of the prominence of the participants but for the reason that the event was characterized by an elegance and beauty most extraordinary. The wedding, which took place in the Alexander apartments in the Association Building at 8:30, was witnessed only by relatives and immediate friends of which there were a considerable number. To the strains of a beautiful wedding march played by Miss Lora Perry the bride walked to the bridal bower on the arm of her father and was given into the keeping of Mr. Collins when Rev. Charles Quinny of the Church of the Redeemer, using the impressive Episcopal service, pronounced them man and wife. Miss Fay Bartholomew, formerly of this city but now of Portland and a close friend of the bride for many years, was with Miss Alexander during the ceremony as maid of honor while Roy Ritner acted in the capacity of best man for Mr. Collins. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the bride tossed her bouquet into the crowd and it was captured by Miss Sybil CLOPTON.

Miss Alexander looked most beautiful in her wedding dress, a soft creton of white crepe virgin with an exquisite overdress of Irish crochet and a flowing bridal veil. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses. Miss Bartholomew was lovely in a gown of white meteor satin. She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds. Mrs. R. Alexander, mother of the bride, was handsomely gowned in delicate lavender while Mrs. Elmer Perry Dodd, sister of the bride, wore a rich dress of satin brocade.

From 9 until 11, the Alexander apartments and several adjoining apartments were thrown open for a wedding reception and during the two hours a great host of friends came to extend felicitations and congratulations to the newly married pair. The rooms had been transformed into a bower of loveliness by a profusion of white and pink streamers of white chiffon, while the halls were made luxuriant with ornate Navajo rugs. A concerted orchestra played soft music during the evening, their selections being broken by two vocal selections, "Until You Came," and "I Know a Lovely Garden," sung in the rich voice of Mrs. Anna Selkirk Norton of Walla Walla.

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, Miss Bartholomew and Mr. Ritner while Mrs. W. H. McCormack, Mrs. Dodd and Mrs. W. L. Thompson looked after the guests in the reception room. In the dining room presiding were the Mesdames G. M. Rice, Alice Sheridan, Leona Thompson, A. J. McAllister, F. B. CLOPTON, C. P. Bishop, Lee Moorhouse and T. M. Starkweather and assisting them were the Mesdames George Hartman, Jr., John Adams, Ben L. Burroughs, Frank Hays, Mark Moorhouse and Fred Earle and the Misses Edith Johnson, Gertrude Campbell, Sybil CLOPTON and Lotta Livermore. At the punch bowl were the Mesdames Nesmith Ankeny, Lawrence Frazier, R. L. Paddock, Roy Kirkley, Roy Alexander and Miss Patterson and in the hall were Mrs. C. E. Nelson, Mrs. Willard Bond, Mrs. W. H. Lytle and Mrs. Richard Mayberry. The gift room was in charge of Mrs. Augusta Moulle, Mrs. W. C. Shultz, Mrs. Lachlan Macleay, Mrs. J. Roy Raley, Mrs. Sam R. Thompson and Miss Effie Jean Frazier and in their keeping were hundreds of tokens of good will, rich pieces of silver, valuable articles of cut glass and a magnificent array of beautiful and costly presents of all descriptions designed for usefulness and ornamentation.

The bride is a daughter of Pendleton, having been born in this city, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Alexander are too well known here to need comment. For a number of years she has been prominently identified with the social life of the city and has been universally popular. The groom has been a resident of Pendleton for a number of years during which time he has established himself in the business world and became a favorite in social circles. He is the local manager of the Balfour-Guthrie grain buying company and is well known throughout the county. The happy couple left Tuesday night by auto for Walla Walla and entrained Wednesday for the Puget Sound country where they will spend a honeymoon of two weeks before returning to Pendleton.

Paddock, Mrs. Aikine Baumelster, Mrs. Alvina Baumelster, Mrs. Anna Selkirk Norton, all of Walla Walla, Miss Bloch of La Grande and Miss Patterson of Portland.
