WANT MURPHY AS CAPTAIN OF CO. 1

For the purpose of mustering out company L, third regiment, O. N. G., Major L. H. Knapp, of the adjutant general's office, is now here, but from appearances at this time the command will be reorganized and strengthened instead of being mustered out.
 Since his arrival here Major Knapp has gone into the status of the company and has found that the chief bone of the company is inability to find good men for officers. However, he believes that he is in a way to overcome this difficulty by prevailing upon Captain C. A. Murphy, superintendent at the branch asylum, and former captain of company M of Salem, to take the command. Major Knapp and Captain Murphy were officers together in the famous Second Oregon and the friendship between them has continued since that time. Accordingly the major looked to the former Salemite for aid in the task of keeping the Pendleton guard company going.
 According to Major Knapp he has secured a provisional promise from Murphy that he will accept the captaincy of the local company if it is continued. That the conditions may be met is the belief of Major Knapp and he is busy today lining things up for a reorganization meeting to be held tomorrow evening. All members of the company are requested to assemble at the armory at that time for the purpose of discussing the question of continuing the company.
 If Captain Murphy will accept the command of the company it will mean the continuance of the Pendleton company and also the subsequent success of the organization. During his service in the Second Oregon and his later service as captain at Salem, Mr. Murphy earned the reputation of being the most capable captain in the third regiment and also the most popular officer with his men.

M. L. AKERS MAKES USEFUL INVENTION

An invention recently perfected by M. L. Akers of the Pendleton Iron works is proving very useful to farmers in this vicinity. It is the Akers' hoe attachment of which an illustration is given below. The device answers a double purpose in that it regulates the depth of a drill and also packs the soil around the seed. It is an attachment that seems of inestimable value to farmers and needs only to be understood to be made use of.

 The hoe attachments are being manufactured at the Pendleton Iron works and the demand for it is already on for the device indicates that it will come into very general if not universal use. A patent has been applied for by Mr. Akers.

COUSINS IN A KNIFE DUEL.
 One Is Disemboweled, the Other Badly Cut; Arrested for Murder.
 Harrison, Ark.—Following a friendly discussion as to who was the best man, William Foster and Charles Sexton, each thirty-five years old, cousins and neighboring farmers living near Mount Judea, ten miles from Jasper, in Newton county, engaged in a duel with knives. As a result Sexton is dead and Foster cannot live. The two men left their homes early to cut fodder and were chummy, as they had always been.
 They found whisky on their way, and after drinking, stopped at a cross road store near Mount Judea, where the argument as to superior strength took place. Foster pushed Sexton from the store platform, throwing him against a fence. Sexton drew his knife and rushed at his cousin, whose knife was ready. Spectators fled and left the men to fight it out.
 The battle lasted several minutes and was stopped when the men dropped from exhaustion and loss of blood. They were carried to neighboring houses, where it was found by physicians that Sexton was completely disemboweled and that Foster was cut in the back, one incision nearly reaching the heart. He is under arrest, being guarded by officers. Sexton died from his wounds after assuring Foster and others that he bore no ill feeling. The cousins each expressed regret and blamed the booze. The men were both heads of large families.
