WHALING IN GULF IS PROFITABLE INDUSTRY

Houston, Texas.—Some time ago it was announced that whaling was declared to be a profitable venture in the Gulf of Mexico and that a Norwegian whaling fleet would attempt the work. However, the story of whales in the Gulf was scouted along the coast as well as in Norway where capital was sought to further the work.

However, it has just come to light that great profits are being derived from whaling near Buenos Ayres, the work being conducted by a South American syndicate, Capt. Carl Larson, who is at the head of the work, in making a voyage around the Horn found the sea literally filled with whales off the coast of Buenos Ayres. At that port he prevailed upon a wealthy man to form a company, saying he could find the balance in Norway. However, his story was scouted when he told it in Norway and he was forced to return to South America to complete the financing.

The new company put out a fleet of whalers and the venture proved more successful than even the stories of Larson predicted. As a result Norwegian capital is awakening and whaling companies are being formed for operation in southern waters. A total of 29 companies have been organized in Norway as a result and the industry will become general through southern waters.

ROOSTER AS A RAT KILLER.

Pennsylvanian Has a Bird That Surpasses Terriers.

York, Pa.—A large game rooster owned by William Reachard of North Colorus township, is attracting attention all through the neighborhood by its proficiency as an exterminator of rats and mice.

The lanky fowl stalks for hours through the corn fields, watching for the rodents to run from beneath shocks of fodder, their favorite haunts. Once in the open, the chase has only one termination in all cases, the rooster easily overtaking and killing his prey by shaking it like a terrier.

Reachard also declares that the fowl, in its keenness for the sport, often watches rat holes in the barn like a cat until its victims appear.

WOMAN WINS SHIPPERS.

Captain of Steamboat Beats Her Masculine Rivals.

St. Louis, Mo.—Holding a pilot and master's license and with a thorough knowledge of the Mississippi and Illinois rivers a woman at the wheel of the steamboat Mary is one of the chief competitors for transportation of the apple crop from the Illinois district.

Mrs. Willis G. Hulet, captain, commander and pilot of the boat, belonging to her husband, is the only woman steamboat master in this section of the Mississippi valley.

Several years ago, when her husband failed in his examination for a pilot and master's license because of defective eyes, Mrs. Hulet came to St. Louis and passed with credits to spare.

She took charge of the steamer, and with the husband acting as the engineer they have been successful in competition for the moving of the heavy fruit crop this season.

Besides being proficient as a commander, she also is a good mother to her two children.

A little boy of 4 romps and plays on the decks of the boat, while a daughter, 6 months old, is constantly with the mother in the pilot house.

SAYS WIGGLING OF EARS SHOWS DONKEY TRAITS

Chicago—Another prized accomplishment of childhood has been frowned upon by science. No longer will the boy who can wig-wag his ears arouse envy in the hearts of his school chums.

J. Howard Moore, instructor of zoology at the Crane Technical high school, placed the ban on the flip-flopping by declaring such an action was "violating a law of science and merely giving strength to tendencies operating against his proper evolution."

Translated into schoolboy English, Mr. Moore's taboing of one of the time honored amusements of the schoolroom means that such an accomplishment points to traits in the possession of the wagger which usually belong to the donkey.

"Man was once a wild animal and contented unarmed with other animals for food and life. And so long as

DID THEIR WOOING ON A MOTORCYCLE

Washington Dentist Uses Machine in Romance That is Successful.

Washington.—Who would think that you'd find romance in a motorcycle? The fact that little Dan Cupid never overlooks a chance was evidenced when by means of a motorcycle—ordinary pieces of unfeeling machinery—Dr. J. Bartlett Hills, a prominent dentist of 1312 New York avenue wedded Miss Edith Ashteton of this city.

Friends of the couple state that Dr. Hills and Miss Ashteton met several months ago at the residence of a mutual friend, and after the usual introductions the doctor had led it be known by inference that he was the proud possessor of one of the cutest little motorcycles that ever put-putted down Pennsylvania avenue. Promptly Miss Ashteton showed her courage by accepting an invitation to cycle with him.

Then, amid the sweet-scented dusks of late summer evening, down the peaceful stretch of the avenue, where the sparrows chirped and cheeped, the doctor and his fiancée rode the motorcycle. Miss Ashteton rode in front and the doctor, ever watchful of a reckless telegraph messenger steered.

Then Dan Cupid decided that as there were two carburetors with but a single thought and two cylinders that beat as one he might as well take a hand in the situation, and shortly after announcement of the engagement was made public.

The couple were married by the Rev. H. Schroeder and immediately after left for their honeymoon through New York.

But, honestly, who would have supposed that a motorcycle contained all that romance?
