New Arrivals Located on Homes Under Furnish Project--Fruit Growers Show That East Cannot Compete With States on Pacific Coast.

(Special Correspondence.)

Stanfield, Nov. 12--Plumbers are now engaged in the new Stanfield high school building, the work being in charge of H. A. Chamberlain of Walla Walla. The contractors have promised to have sufficient finished within the next week or ten days to enable the schools to be transferred from the present quarters to the new building.

J. H. Norton is erecting some temporary buildings on his tract recently purchased just east of Stanfield and under the Furnish ditch. He has dug a well but will postpone the building of his residence and barn until his return from Minnesota with the remainder of his livestock and household goods. Since his arrival last month he has been busily engaged most of the time with the building of three bridges for the Inland Irrigation company across the government canal.

Roy Tyler of Lexington, Ore., has moved here with his family and has rented one of C. E. Webster's cottages for the winter.

Miss Windle has returned from Pendleton, being called here to take care of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gray.

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Muchanan entertained a few of their friends at cards, after which refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hall are receiving the congratulations of their friends over the arrival of a baby boy.

Thursday evening a very enjoyable dance was given at the C. E. Webster hall, excellent music being rendered by the orchestra from Hermiston. Mrs. J. L. Parker of Stanfield being the pianist. Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. H. E. Bartholomew. Quite a number of people attended from Echo and Hermiston.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. E. E. Cotant entertained several ladies at their friends at cards, after which refreshments were served.

An interesting meeting of the Stanfield Fruit Growers' association was held Saturday evening. Frank Sloan and J. M. Kyle, who have recently returned from an extended trip to Ohio and other eastern states, related their experiences there and gave some very interesting comparisons of conditions east and in the Oregon country. More particularly along the line of fruit raising and dairying, it being clearly shown that the eastern states can never hope to compete with the Pacific coast country in producing fruit, etc., because of the fact that their trees do not produce more than one year out of three or four. The program included violin solos by Prof. F. D. Carruth with piano accompaniment by Miss Helen Wheeler. The meeting adjourned to Saturday evening, December 2.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Sloan who are looking after the Copeland place in the Furnish project, have gone to Portland for a few days to visit relatives and friends.

TAKES TEETH; LEAVES MONEY

Thief Also Shows Preference for Beads When Watch Is Near.

St. Louis, Mo.--Police are puzzled to know whether a thief they are anxious to find is a faddist, in need of teeth or of a religious turn, or all of these. Patrick Fitzgerald, 119 North Twelfth street, last night reported the theft of a set of false teeth and a string of prayer beads. These articles were taken from a room in which was a sum of money and a watch. Neither of the latter was taken.

If all railroad magnates had been and were like B. F. Youkm, the country would have had little or no trouble with them.

Orpheum.

Good Program for Tuesday's change: 1. "The California Revolution of 1846." Kaleem. This story deals with the proclamation of thirteen American settlers in California in 1846, who seized the pueblo of Sonora, raised the bear flag and declared California a republic. There is also a good love story which involves the Spanish gentleman who was in command of the pueblo at the time and a love affair between the seniorita he wished to marry and a dashing young American who finally secured the girl, even at the very altar.

2. "Raffles Caught." The strongest theme ever flashed on the screen. A magnificent portrayal of one of the cleverest plays ever depicted in motion pictures. The story of a gentleman burglar who is finally caught by the police through his inability to resist the appeal of a pair of beautiful eyes.

3. "Guerra Troupe." Pathe. A mighty clever acrobatic stunt. The acts are interesting and the photography is well done.

4. "It Happened in the West." Selig. The call of the blood and love of race cause an educated Indian to return to his own people. A dramatic story with true heart interest. The picture is dignified, human and instructive.

5. "His Stubborn Way." Lubin Samuel Bumstead was the original grouch. He was never nappy unless he could be disagreeing with or opposing somebody. He had a daughter, Myrtle, and she had a lover, Will. They nearly despaired of ever securing the old gentleman's consent to their marriage, so they fixed up a clever scheme for getting around him. It worked like a charm and must be seen to be appreciated. It is very funny and cleverly acted.

The Pastime. It is worth while. Pictures that don't hurt the eyes.

Big Baseball Extra! Goes on Tuesday.

"Athletics vs. Giants." In the world's championship baseball series of 1911. This is one of the greatest baseball pictures ever made and will delight all enthusiasts of the great American sport. It will be of special interest, with such stars as McGraw, Mathewson, Marquard, Merkle, Wiltz, Doyle and others who have never appeared on the scene before. You will see pictured all the important events at the games played in New York and Philadelphia, in the struggle between the winners of the American and National League pennants for the world's series trophy.

"Josh's Suicide." Biograph. A character farce full of good laughs and other good things. Josh had cause for complaint. He wasn't good enough for his wife. When the wife got Josh's letter she thought that he had departed this life as he said. He did. He got aboard and came to New York, where he was having a good time when Mrs. Josh and an old beau whom Josh disliked got aboard the same Fifth Avenue stage and there the trouble begins.

"The Artist's Sons." Selig. This film deserves commendation. The subject and the setting are both so unusual that their popularity is assured.

"Trailing the Counterfeiters." Biograph. The two funny sleuths will give you some hearty laughs.

"The Flaming Arrows." American Pathe. This story is well laid out and well acted.

The Cosy.

For Monday and Tuesday a powerful Biblical story, a feature military drama, two fine pictures of western life and a comedy.

"Herodias." Eclair. Taken from the Biblical story of the beheading of John the Baptist and introducing the famous Salome dance. Herodias, wife of Herod of Galilee, angered at the denunciations of John the Baptist had him thrown into prison. Herodias brought her daughter Salome to dance before Herod, who delighted at her grace and charms vowed to give her anything she might ask. Herodias induced Salome to ask for the head of John the Baptist. John was beheaded and at sight of the bleeding head Salome fell in a swoon.

"The Law of Retaliation." Ambrosia. A feature film relating in a powerful manner an episode of the siege of Pisa. The young son of a warrior chieftain was wantonly killed by the enemy, and mad with grief he had his men capture the son of the murderer. He demanded a large ransom for the boy but when he received the money he cut loose the ladder on which the boy was descending and he fell to his death.

"The Love of the West." American.

Jack left the east and went west where he made a new home and then sent for his sweetheart. They were married but she soon tired of ranch life and implored him to go back east, but he refused, but he let her go. Alone he wandered out on the range and exclaimed: "I still have you to love--my West."

"The Missionary's Gratitude." Biograph. The missionary was saved from drowning by New Moccasin, a Cheyenne. The Sioux recaptured New Moccasin and the missionary pleaded in vain for his life. An Indian maid fell in love with the captive and cut his bonds, and the three escaped. The missionary married the lovers and all ends well.

"A Strange Invitation to Dinner." Ambrosia. Foster met a pretty girl and invited himself to dinner with her. He accompanied her home after he had bought turkey and other good things. But, alas, she was married and poor Foster was roughly handled by her husband, a prizefighter.

At the Grand.

Monday's change: Roger and Taylor, singing and talking comedians, are the leading vaudeville artists appearing at the Grand during the fore part of this week and they are the real thing as laugh makers. Every second of their fifteen minutes on the stage is responsible for a fresh ripple of mirth and, as a laugh is the best tonic in the world, Roger and Taylor are entitled to membership in the medical society of the city. Hear them and get happy.

As a second feature of merit, the Grand is now offering the Musical Kolarskys, Russian harmony makers, talented, versatile and clever. A quarter of an hour with these subjects of the czar will make you think of Russia as a country where there is something else besides anarchists, bombs and plots.

The usual high class motion pictures will be shown in conclusion of the program.

AT THE OREGON THEATRE

Famous Opera Star Coming.

Joseph P. Sheehan, America's favorite and the greatest tenor ever heard in the English language, to bring his all star company to the Oregon Theatre Sunday evening, November 19th in "The Love Tales of Hoffman." The Sheehan English opera company this year is said to excel all previous efforts. It consists of the pick of the Chicago and Boston companies, each principal being selected for his or her fitness for the roles they will sing, and the chorus is the cream of the two big companies.

Never before in America has an all-star opera company been put before the public and no greater compliment can be paid this organization than to say it is on a par with its famous leader.

THE BEST YET.

A Number Added to the Saved in the Last Few Days of Services.

Expressions of appreciation for the evangelists and of delight over the results in converts thus far made in the revival at the Christian church were to be heard on every hand all day yesterday. Even the sluggish and well high indifferent Christian is catching the evangelistic spirit and is taking hold with a vim. A number were baptized at yesterday's services and many are interested who have never manifested much interest in religion before.

If the first two sermons, delivered Saturday night and last night, on the church are a sample of the series Evangelist Holmes has announced on this subject, the people of Pendleton have a rare treat in store for them.

Saturday night the evangelist took up the Prophecies of Daniel in which is foretold the establishment of the "Kingdom of Heaven" and gave a conclusive argument for the establishment of the church on the Day of Pentecost. Mr. Holmes thinks that every one should follow the injunction of Paul in being able to "give unto every man that asketh of you, a reason for the hope that is within you" and proposed that every one should be so equipped.

Following up the line of argument last night he spoke with great vigor and power on "The Apostolic Church," using a large chart with which to illustrate his theme. He has announced that he will add to this chart from night to night until he has retraced the history of the church from its beginning down to the present time. The evangelist has shown his fairness in presenting doctrinal matters, in that he reveals a perfect respect for the opinions of others, but for himself, insists on having "chapter and verse" for all he has to say. He believes in "keeping the Law of the Lord" and comes down pretty heavy on the conscience of Christians who are not sufficiently devoted to follow it to the letter.

He expressed his hearty appreciation of the way in which the church people are backing his efforts, and especially with the gradual increase in the attendance in spite of the changeable and disagreeable weather.

Mr. Ridenous, the evangelist of song, seemed at his very best and was gratified in being able to get about every one to "come on now and sing." He thinks a Christian has every reason to be happy in his work, and so he "praises God with joy and gladness."

The happy vein of humor that runs through all he undertakes, keeps every one in a delightful frame of mind. But while he laughs as he sings, and makes most every one else "smile out loud." It is plain to all that he is deeply in earnest and desires the salvation of men above all else. His solos are especially uplifting.

Tonight Mr. Ridenous has arranged for a union rally of all the Christian young people of the city. Fine music and short, live addresses are promised from representatives of all the organizations in the city. The young people will be given right of way, but others are invited to join with them and share the good things of the evening.

The evangelist effort will continue each night through the week.

LAST WOMAN MINE WORKER.

Began in Colliery Dressed as a Man to Avoid Arrest and Was 92 at Death.

London, Eng.--By the death of old Kitty Grayson, which has just taken place at Brynn, in the Wigan coal field, probably the last survivor of the race of pit women of the old days has passed away. Kitty who was in her ninety-second year, was, in fact, very likely the last woman who worked in the mine, and her life linked up the present with the past when women and children toiled long and arduously in the bowels of the earth. The act of parliament, known as Lord Ashley's act, which prohibited women and girls, as well as young boys under the age of 10 years, from working underground in the mines, came into operation in 1843, when Kitty was a sprightly young woman of 19 working as a collier's "drawer" or waggoner, in the pit.

In order to evade what was then regarded as a legislative innovation by many of those in whose interest the law had been put upon the statute books, Kitty Grayson disguised herself as a man by donning her father's breeches, jacket and flannel shirt. The government inspector got wind of it, however, and paid a surprise visit to the colliery, catching Kitty at her work below the ground. The result was that she was instantly stopped, though she had by this time actually worked for twelve months in the pit after the act of parliament had become operative, and had, of course, been defying the law of the land all that time.

In later life old Kitty often told how she had outrun the legislature by donning her disguise. Kitty had many interesting memories of colliery life in the olden time, and was wont to describe how she herself had been injured many times while following her work in the mine, among her injuries being three arm breakages, of which marks remained to the end of her long career.

TRAMP'S WIT FREES HIM.

Arrested for Begging, Argues That It Is a Legitimate Occupation.

San Mateo, Calif.--A jury of prominent Peninsula business men heard Fred Murray charged with vagrancy, give expert testimony to the effect that soliciting alms in the aristocratic precincts of Hillsboro was a perfectly legitimate profession that should be recognized by law.

In precise language Murray argued that a citizen had a constitutional right to solicit alms. The defendant argued his case so well that Foreman D. A. Raybould succeeded in getting the jury to return a compromise verdict, which was that the defendant be declared guilty and that no sentence be imposed.

Murray was ordered by Recorder Carl Elfyng to get out of town immediately, which he did.
