HARD TIMES FOR A BABY KING.

China's Little Ruler's Routine of Living Would Kill Ordinary Child.
 Peking, China.—As soon as the Emperor Kuang-Hsu of China died the baby Pu-Yi was taken from his mother and placed in the Forbidden City in the hands of the empress dowager, who was henceforth regarded as the baby emperor's mother. Even the hidebound etiquette of the Chinese court had given way, however, to the imperial baby's grief at being separated from his mother and arrangements had to be made for occasional visits.
 The baby emperor is addressed in the palace as Wan-Sui-Yeh (lord of ten thousand years). Every morning he is awakened at 6 o'clock by the singing of eight eunuchs, and he has three meals a day—at 8 a. m., noon and 6 p. m., retiring to rest at 8 p. m. The baby emperor's diet is a simple one, the only rule observed being never to put any article of food upon the table which cannot be procured immediately at any time of the year. The reason is that the emperor is supposed to be given anything he asks for, and if this is impossible the unfortunate official responsible is liable to severe punishment. Among many other things the emperor has never tasted fish.

 The emperor is said to be wilful by nature and to revel in mischief, especially when he can induce his attendants to follow him into a flooded courtyard after a heavy rain. By a decree issued recently Lu-Jun-Hsiang and Chen-Pao-Ch'en were appointed imperial tutors and it was directed that they should take up their duties upon an auspicious date to be determined by the board of astronomy. The latter selected the eighteenth day of the seventh moon (September 10). Both these tutors are Chinese scholars of the old-fashioned type, but it is believed that a foreign tongue, probably English, will form part of the imperial curriculum at a later date.

Marriage Decreases in England.

London—Fewer people than ever, in proportion to the population, are getting married in England and Wales. In his quarterly return, issued recently, the registrar general states that in the first three months of this year the marriages of 89,500 persons were registered, being equal to an annual rate of 110.9 persons married per 1,000 of the estimated population, against an average rate of 114 per 1,000 in the first quarter of the ten years 1901-10. Of counties with populations exceeding 100,000 Buckinghamshire, with 7.2, had the lowest rate, and Northumberland, with 11.8, the highest. London's rate was 11.5. The birth dealt with in the report are those for the second quarter of the year. They numbered 225,777, and were in the proportion of 25.9 annually per 1,000 of the population.

THE WAY OF THE MOTH.

"That young chap comes around to the stage door every night in spite of the fact that he hasn't the ghost of a chance to get in."
 "Well, there's nothing remarkable about that. Did you ever see a moth bumping around an electric light is safe to assure you you will find them interesting, if not instructive."
 FUN.
 "Now," said the chairman of the reception committee, "if it will suit your convenience we will conduct you through some of our greatest industrial establishments. I feel that it is safe to assure you that you will find bulbs."
 "Thank you," replied the distinguished visitor, "but I would really prefer to put in the afternoon witnessing some kind of sport, if you have anything in that line that you consider worth while."
 "Very well. We will go out to the race track. There are to be automobile, motorcycle and aeroplane races and there's almost sure to be a serious accident."

BRINGS SEA ELEPHANT TALE.

Explorer Reports Seeing Herds of Supposedly Extinct Monsters.
 Los Angeles, Cal.—That large and shaggy sea-elephants, classed by great scientists as prehistoric and long since extinct, still exist in large herds on Gaudalupe Island is the declaration of Pingree I. Osburn.
 Osburn says three herds of sea-elephants, the largest of which contained about fifty animals, were sighted on Gaudalupe Island by the expedition exploring the coast line with the U. S. S. Albatross.
 Two were shot. The largest measured twenty-one feet in length, and was more than eighteen feet high, says Osburn, who is connected with the New York Museum exhibition.

ROOSTER HAS FOUR WINGS.

Enola, Pa.—Democrats of Cumberland county regard as prophetic the hatching out of a rooster with four wings, owned by William Smith of this place.
 Party enthusiasts are training the bird to flap both sets of propellers with equal energy, so that it will be in prime condition for anticipated use on November 8.
 The fowl has a pair of wings on its body at the proper place and another wing on each leg. While traveling through the air flopping both pair of wings the noise resembles the chugging of a motor, and the bird looks like a miniature aeroplane.
 The elephant seldom sleeps more than four or five hours a day, in spite of his capacity for hard work.
