make the most fashionable garments in the world; their styles are distinctive and correct; the man who wears them has a look of "class" and distinction which can be had in no other clothes. Not only that; these clothes give the wearer an air, and a sense, of quality; the fabrics are all-wool, the choicest weaves selected from the best looms of the world; beautiful Scotch weaves, English worsteds, fine American fabrics. And the tailoring is perfect.

Oregon and Washington.

University of Oregon, Eugene, Ore., Nov. 16 .-- On Saturday of this week the football teams of the State Universities of Washington and Oregon will meet in Portland to decide the Fifteen northwest championship. thousand fans are expected to be present, among them the governors of Oregon and Washington, the presidents of the two universities and the mayor of Seattle and mayor of Porland.

Each team comes down to the big game with a record of victories and no defeats. Whitman and Washington state succumbed to Oregon; Idaho and O, A. C. fell before Washington. Sporting writers believe that Washington will win, but the men from Oregon have determined to upset the predictions. The Oregon students point to the fact that their team is composed of bonafide students with excellent class standing, who have, as an ingrain of character, the habit of being satisfied with nothing but their
