M'DEVITT'S WIN BOWLING MATCH

SEND HOOVER'S ROLLERS DOWN IN FIRST MATCH

City League of Four Teams Organize and Will Play Series of Matches During Season—Another Battle Scheduled for Monday Night.

In the first of a series of bowling games which is to last until March, M'Devitt's team last night won out over L. E. Hoover's rollers by the score of 2319 to 2255, and the big tournament which is to decide the personnel of the team of five which is to represent Pendleton at the big national tournament in Los Angeles was formally launched.

On Monday night a league of four teams was organized, Ray Crystal and Adolph Molitor being the respective captains of the two teams which have not yet clashed. Their bowlers will meet next Monday evening, after which some idea may be secured as to the comparative strength of the teams.

Each team will meet each other one five times and these games will make the tournament last until March, when the five men having the best total scores will be chosen for the representative team to go to the California tournament.

A dance is to be given soon after Thanksgiving for the purpose of raising funds with which to defray the expenses and it is probable that others will follow later on. According to members of the teams, seats will be arranged in the Pastime parlors and ladies will be invited to attend on the evenings set aside for the tournament games.

HUNTERS IN ROCKIES MAROONED BY BLIZZARD

Cumberland, Wis.—John W. Hogan arrived here and relates a thrilling experience while on a hunting expedition in the Sun river range of the Rocky mountains.

With a guide Mr. Hogan started from Choteau, Mont., for the mountains, and when traversing a narrow trail on a mountain ledge they were overtaken by a terrific blizzard and the thermometer fell to twenty below zero.

In the blinding snow storm the horse carrying the pack of provisions was struck by an avalanche of snow and hurled over the ledge into the Sun party with nothing to eat excepting a few graham crackers.

The other horse caught its foot in a crevice and broke its leg. They killed this horse and subsisted upon crackers, horsemeat and a quart of Scotch whisky for four days, when the storm subsided and they followed the trail back to civilization.

BEATTIE ADMITS MURDER AND PAYS PENALTY

to answer any question relating to his intimacy with Beulah Binford. But during the morning Paul Beattie, Henry's cousin, had confessed to the Richmond police that on the Saturday prior to the killing he had bought a single barrel shotgun for his cousin and had turned it over to him, with three cartridges. Paul later identified the gun found on Midlothian turnpike as the gun he gave his cousin.

The inquest adjourned at noon with Beattie still on the stand and while he was eating lunch at his home, officers accompanied by Paul Beattie entered the house and arrested him. At the afternoon session of the inquest, Beulah Binford took the stand and told of her relations with Beattie. She told of the renewal of these relations shortly after Beattie's son, Henry Clay Beattie III was born, and her return to Richmond from Norfolk where she met Beattie.

The coroner's jury after a brief consideration held Beattie for the action of the grand jury.

On August 14, the grand jury returned an indictment against Beattie for murder in the first degree, and on August 21, he was placed on trial. Then ensued one of the strangest, bitterest legal battles that Virginia has ever known.

Out in the little Chesterfield county court house, fourteen miles from Richmond, five miles from a railroad, a courteous, kindly southern gentleman, Judge Watson, took charge of the trial. District Attorney Gregory assisted by Louis O. Wendenburg, one of Richmond's leading criminal lawyers conducted the prosecution and Harry M. Smith and Hill Carter made the fight for Beattie's life.

The physical facts surrounding the crime, and contradictory nature of the stories told by Henry Beattie, his unfaithfulness to his wife, and the story of his cousin Paul were the foundation upon which the state rested its case. The father, sister and friends of Beattie took the stand in a vain effort to establish for him a reputation that would convince the twelve Chesterfield county farmers who made up the jury, that he was incapable of the crime charged against him.

Throughout the trial, Paul Beattie, the star witness for the prosecution, and little seventeen year old Beulah Binford, sweetheart of the prisoner, were kept locked in Henrico county jail. Paul was on the stand for two days but the seventeen year old girl was never taken to Chesterfield court house to tell her story. She had been summoned as a witness by the prosecution but the shrewd lawyers believed that her attachment for Henry Beattie would make her an undesirable witness, and she was never placed on the stand.

In her seat, her mother, a big middle-aged woman, told the story of her daughter's relations with Henry Beattie; his love for the girl and his renewal of their intimacy after his marriage. After three weeks of taking testimony, and argument, the twelve Chesterfield county farmers retired one evening to the jury room, knelt down and prayed for Divine guidance, discussed the evidence, knelt and prayed again and then filed into the court room with a verdict of guilty. Judge Watson immediately pronounced the death sentence fixing November 24, today, as the date of the execution.

An appeal to the higher courts failed, and Beattie fixed his hope on an application for pardon, reprieve or commutation of sentence to Governor Mann. After a short consideration, however, Governor Mann, in a scathing statement declined to grant the pardon, and expressed the opinion that Beattie was attempting to escape the penalty of a crime of which he
