AT THE PICTURE SHOWS

The Orpheum.
A swell program for Friday and Saturday's change:

1. "The Cabin Boy." Vitagraph. "The Cabin Boy" is a girl and brings her separated parents together.

2. "Mike's Hero." Edison. Mike falls headlong into the lake. Being unable to swim, a tramp rescues him with a boat hook. Mike rewards the tramp by taking him home, feeding him and giving him his best and only suit of clothes, while he himself is obliged to go about in his overalls. In more ways than one the tramp takes advantage of Mike's kindness. He even goes so far as to become attentive to Mike's sweetheart. This is the last straw and Mike decides to commit suicide by drowning. He goes to the very place where the tramp rescued him and deliberately jumps in, but finds shallow water. It now dawns upon him that the ungrateful tramp did not save his life.

3. "The Gambler's Influence." Lubin. When Jack Harper went west he got into trouble and was helped out by Tom Manley, a gambler, who received him into his cabin. Jack took to gambling and finally gambled away even a ring that his sweetheart had given him. Jack determines to rob the stage coach. It so happened that Elsie had decided to come to him. She arrived the very day Jack had set for the holdup. Received by Manley, she was taken to the cabin. There Manley noticed a mask had been cut from the blanket and his rifle was missing. Excusing himself he jumped on a horse and was just in time to prevent Jack from becoming a stage robber.

4. "The Tie That Binds." Eclipse. This film tells a strong story of a child's influence over an improvident father.

5. "A Round-Up in Chila." Kosmik. South America has to date figured very little in motion picture display but we have thrown our lines through the earth. Rodeo, a favorite sport. Fete day. Scenes in the Arena. Caballeros chasing a bull. In a Chilian Race Course.

ground. Mountain background. Great, ground. Arranging the events. Saddling and mounting a bull. Unusual scenes. Admitting his enemies. Biped and quadruped. The Bull Goaded. Chased by dogs and horsemen. The bull victorious, horsemen dislodged. Bull freed.

The Pastime.
The best in motion pictures. Friday's program.

"The Veil of Happiness." By Geo. Clemenceau, ex-premier of France. A striking Chinese drama of great beauty and a power of acting that forms a true feature film. The settings both natural and artificial are fine. These pictures will seem like "a dream of picture galleries." The so many paintings from gifted hands scene beside the pagoda, where the wretched Chang sees his wife accept the attentions of a lover, the corner of the Chinese town where the blind man is cured by the sorcerer are all too short.

"Three of a Kind." Edison. An unusually clever comedy played in the famous national park in Colorado. Two pretty girls, an obdurate papa, and three young men go through a series of adventures terminating in a final scene which is side splitting.

"The Adventures of Billy." Biograph. This film pictures the influences that surround such a walf as Billy, a newsboy. A policeman who saw this picture was asked his opinion and he said: "It is the best film I ever saw."

"The Slavey's Affinity." Lubin. A pretty story of humble and sincere devotion. Peggy, the little drudge of the boarding house, fairly worshipped the struggling lawyer. She is the heroine but not the bride.

IRRIGATION VENTURE CHANGES U. S. BOUNDARY

Houston, Texas.—When a Texas irrigation company sought to secure a flow of water from the Rio Grande by cutting an eighteen foot channel to supply its Texas farms, it unwittingly changed the boundary of the United States and of Mexico, which today is the subject of international litigation.

In the litigation several Mexican landowners have combined with the United States government in filing suit at Brownsville. The defendant company admits that the course of the Rio Grande has been diverted from its natural flow by cutting the channel through one of the large bends. This cut was made about 40 miles upstream from Brownsville.

As a result several wealthy Mexican land owners find their former Mexican ranches part of Texas in the United States. Although faithful to Madero and the Mexican flag, yet they are subject to the laws of the United States and the taxes of Texas, because the government survey says the Rio Grande shall be considered the lawful boundary line between the United States and Mexico.

In the suit the government prays that the original course of the Rio Grande be restored, while the irrigation company favors expansion for the United States and would indemnify the Mexicans, who in a night found their ranches moved into the United States.

Undulating land grows better crops than a level surface.

Probably the worst thing about politics is the politicians.

LOUVRE HONEYCOMBED WITH ANCIENT EXITS

London.—The authorities of the Louvre, spurred on, no doubt, by the outcry that has arisen over the loss of "La Gioconda," have made a thorough exploration of the immense piles where so many national treasures are stored. The result is not a little disconcerting.

M. Pujat, accompanied by the architect of the building and several of the oldest and most experienced of the caretakers, spent five days in a complete investigation of the in-terminable corridors.

To their immense surprise they discovered a number of unknown passages and secret entrances, admitting to various rooms where most valuable paintings and artistic treasures were stored.

It is said that if the thief who stole "La Gioconda" knew the Louvre only half as well as M. Pujat now knows it he could make his escape in perfect safety by half a score of ways.

Careful and minute plans have now been drawn of all these secret ways, and arrangements are being made in all haste to have them either walled up or closed by strong iron gratings.

Numbers of these passages were unknown to even the oldest attendants at the Louvre. Their existence must have been forgotten for half a century at least.

It does not inspire much confidence to find that in a building apparently so well guarded as the Louvre this condition of things could have existed for so long.

The present investigation savors of locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen but it will perhaps prevent other national property from going the same way as "La Gioconda."

WOMAN FIGHTS SNOW WITH BABE IN ARMS

Four-Day Battle Against Bitter Blizzard in Montana Is Won by Rangers.

Bellingham.—Caught by a blizzard on a goat trail eight miles east of Bellingham, near the summit of the Cascades, in the Washington forest, Forest Rangers Ridley, McGuire, Monahan and Soil, accompanied by Mrs. Soil and a babe in arms, reached Bellingham in a pitiable condition.

The storm raged for three days. Four days were spent in coming down the Upper Skagit Valley to Marblemount, over a trail usually covered in half a day. There they rested up and doctored the frost bites coming on to this city to report to the forestry bureau.

The party had spent the summer near Baron, on the extreme summit of the Cascades, near the Eastern border of the reserve. The rangers were on their way out for the winter, when overtaken by the blizzard.

A temperature of ten degrees below zero was experienced while they were wearing summer clothing.

All the provisions they carried were intended to last one day but were made to last four days.

KIDNEY OF DEAD MAN GRAFTED TO LIVING BODY

Remarkable Operation Performed Before Congress of Surgeons of North America by Philadelphia Surgeon.

Philadelphia.—A remarkable clinic in surgery was held in connection with the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America being conducted in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital by Dr. L. J. Hammond.

The most ingenious operation was one which only once before had been tried in this country, and then by Dr. Alexis Carroll of New York. That operation, as well as the one of today, included an anastomosis of blood vessels, and the joining of the veins, arteries and other ducts and glands was highly satisfactory.

Only in one particular did Dr. Hammond's operation differ from that of Dr. Carroll, and in that respect it stood out far in advance of that of the New York surgeon. Dr. Carroll had transplanted the kidney of a dog to the place of the diseased kidney which he had removed. It was taken from the dog a few moments before it was to be transplanted. In the case today, Dr. Hammond used the kidney of a man who was killed in an automobile accident.

CHAUFFEURS AND HUMAN LIFE

Inexcusable Street Slaughters in New York City by Joy Riders.

New York.—Responsibility for the killing of eighty-nine persons and the serious injury of 355 others in automobile and cab accidents in the streets of New York since January 1 was attributed yesterday by Colonel Edward S. Cornell, secretary of the National Highway Protective society to "joy riding, drunken chauffeurs, innocent owners of cars and irresponsible and reckless night-hawk cabmen."

"The joy riders" and the night-hawk cabmen are the most dangerous factors to life and limb in this city, and they often get away with it because many of the accidents happen at night," said Colonel Cornell. "In thirteen cases during the month of October the operators of motor cars causing serious accidents fled, thus violating the law in another way."

MALE GARBED WOMAN IS GIVEN HER LIBERTY

Spokane, Wash.—Nell Pickereil, alias Harry Allen, was referred to as "a symphony in brown" by a government official as she tripped down the stairs at the Spokane county jail following her discharge by the federal grand jury, the members of which declined to return a "true bill" for alleged "bootlegging" among the Indians, south of here. Alexander Paul, an Indian, who, the federal authorities say, purchased liquor from the woman, was too intoxicated to testify when called before the jurors and the dismissal resulted. Paul was held as a witness against the woman in a state case to be instituted. Miss Pickereil was arrested more than two months ago and held a prisoner. She wore men's garments and her sex was not suspected until the jail attendants began searching for firearms and other dangerous weapons. "I guess you'd better call the matron," she said, quietly, "as I am a woman, although I have worn men's clothes since leaving my home in the east, more than nine years ago." Miss Pickereil, who is 28 years of age, has a physique that would do credit to a longshoreman. She worked as a man in the grain fields and forests throughout the northwest for years.

Free speech has enabled many a man to give himself away.
