The Football Situation.
One more game on Thanksgiving will be attempted by a few elevens before snow covers up the gridiron for the winter, but practically the football season of 1911 is ended.

Cornell and Pennsylvania both defeated by Pennsylvania state will meet at Philadelphia Thanksgiving day with the Ithacans strongly supported as favorites. Pennsylvania state, still undefeated, meets Pittsburgh the same day.

The defeat of Wisconsin by Chicago and Minnesota's victory over Illinois apparently gives the western conference championship to Minnesota. The point standing of the leading eastern teams up to date follows:

Wagner Batting Leader.
New York, Nov. 27.—Hans Wagner of Pittsburgh, though third in the official list, stepped to the front again this year as the real leader among the batters of the National league, as shown by the official batting average made public today. Kirk and Jackson of Boston, top the Pittsburghers in the list, but each played in less than 40 games, while Wagner figures in 113 contests.

Schulte of Chicago leads the home-run hitters with 21 circuit smashes to his credit; Ludicrous of Philadelphia being a strong second with 16. Svecvark of Chicago was the man who crossed the plate ofttest, being credited with 121 runs.

U. of O. for Athletics.

University of Oregon, Eugene, Nov. 27.—The University of Oregon is taking a leading part among the higher educational institutions of the west in fostering intra-collegiate athletics. Much criticism has been lately directed at over-development of inter-collegiate sports and there is at present a tendency toward athletics confined within the individual college. The argument in favor of the latter form of sport is that it does away with the bad features of inter-collegiate contests, such as professionalism, quarrelling among colleges, and over-emphasis of athletics.

At Oregon there are inter-club and inter-class leagues in all branches of athletics, and especially in baseball and basketball. Tennis is a favorite diversion; and there are a large number of courts which are in constant use by both the men and women. In all these games cups are offered to the winning teams and every effort is made to interest all the students and secure their participation.

New York Defeated.
Havana, Nov. 27.—Almendares defeated the New York National league baseball team yesterday, 6 to 4.

Berg Defeats Donovan.
Spokane, Wash., Nov. 25.—In a match here last night advertised for the championship of America, John

Berg of Spokane defeated Jack Donovan of Philadelphia, in two straight falls, the first with a crotch and near Nelson in 17 minutes, and the second, on a head chancery, in one minute and 50 seconds.

SCORES BORDEN FOR RECIPROcity FIGHT

Ottawa.—"If there is one thing more than another that every Canadian statesman who is worthy of the name ought to avoid, it is fostering or pandering to a spirit of hostility and animosity between Canada and the United States," said Mr. Richard Cartwright, former Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Canadian Senate, in speaking on the manner in which reciprocity was assailed in the last Canadian election.

"I am afraid the mischief Mr. Borden and his friends have done is greater than they will ever be able to repair. Do these people know, do these slingers of mud recall, that the people of the United States are today close to a hundred million strong and within twenty-five years will reach a hundred and fifty millions? That is the kind of power that is the sort of nation, that these people think it wise and prudent and in the interest of the British Empire for us to insult and estrange."

Senator Loughheed, conservative, said that during the election American public men, from President Taft and Speaker Champ Clark down to the humblest, had made it plain that behind reciprocity there was the ulterior purpose of leading Canada away from England and to annexation with the United States.

CORNELL WINS CROSS COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIP

Bookline, Mass., Nov. 25.—Cornell today won the cross country intercollegiate championship here, scoring 48 points. Harvard was second with 55 and Pennsylvania third with 125. Points were scored on the demerit system.

The average man is a good judge of human nature—except in his own case.

PRESBYTERIAN SUNDAY SERMON

(F. J. Milnes, Minister, Phone Main 544.)

Theme: "The Poet's Thanksgiving."
Text: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not (a reverie of anti-materialism) all His benefits."

Thanksgiving is poetry. The great heart is a singing heart. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." Who is the singer? There can be little question. These are the notes of David. It rings with the cadence of David's music. It breathes with the fragrance of David's perfume. For David is sweet. There is not a caustic berry in the garden of his soul. His temper is as the linden with the nectar of northern pinnes. David is a great poet, and his message is that life itself is a poem.

David has been described as "a ruddy-faced, flaxen-haired lad, with elastic step and eager look, and the laughter of springtime's music accumulating in his heart." He is the youngest child and his brothers are jealous of him, but his mother adores him, and when he returned home at night from the folding in of his sheep, his eyes are kissed into somnolence by a mother's love. Then he dreams astacles, awakens early in the morning and goes again with his flocks. In return for his love his brothers despise him, and because he knows not fear the giant is infuriated. Thereupon he slays the huge adversary with a sling, then returns to his flock, picks up his harp and again he sings. What makes him sing? Is David's life a bed of roses? Rather it is a field of battle and of blood. Javelins are hurled at him, conspiracies are plotted against him, a thousand vicious enemies unseath their swords and rush at him like angry bulls in furious conflict. David is surrounded with dangers and disasters a thousand fold. Track him through life and it is like the debris that follows in the wake of a defeated army. But still he sings. What makes him sing? Has he great riches? Does wealth make him happy? Not at this time. He has nothing but his flock and his shepherd's crook, nothing but his harp, and these belong to his father, Jesse. Nothing but the blue sky and the green hills and his own soul,—and with this last he is holding dialogue, singing to himself and to his God. But what is he saying? "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." When his life is endangered and his heart is broken, he sings, "bless the Lord." Life is a poem. That is David's message. That is what he sang and that is what he lived.

Let us carry the message and spirit of David into the observation of this sacred day. Life is not a check-book or a column of figures. Life is not a work of prose. Life is a poem. God is the great poet, and a man's or a woman's life is the biggest and sweetest poem He ever wrote. We cannot pray or suffer or love very much without realizing that life is romance.

Have you no empty chair at your table? Yes, says some sobbing soul, that is very real to me; it is a large part of my life. Is it? The David spirit in Longfellow says that it is also poetry. Have you never listened for the inaudible symphonies of the voiceless dead and heard only, "Break, break, break, and Oh for the touter of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is still?" Have you never cried like "an infant crying in the night, and with no language but a cry?" Then were you never comforted with the admonition: "Alas for him who never sees The Stars shine through his cypress trees

Who hopeless lays his dead away Nor looks to see the breaking day Across the mournful marbles play; Who hath not learned in hours of faith The truth, to flesh and sense unknown, That life is ever lord of death And love can never lose its own."

Have you never observed the green foliage of autumn days turn into the scar and yellow leaf? Did you never sit by the bedside of the sick and the dying? Did you never "stand on the bridge at midnight when the clock was striking the hour?" Did you never fall in love? These and all things else of beauty and worth are poetry. Life is poetry, and if we are grateful for life, let us thank God for poetry—not for verses, but for poetry. Verses are not poetry, but only one of her many gowns worn on special occasions and to suit the taste of special people. Poetry itself is a quality of soul. It is that spirit of interpretation which turns the "Song of the Shirt" into a Song of Love, makes the "Ode to Duty" an Ode to Joy, and plays with her deft fingers upon the lute of life until this once bare and baneful existence becomes the blessed reality of a blissful dream.

In our Thanksgiving, therefore, let us exhaust our expressions of gratitude upon the falsely-so-called "material" things, for big crops and fat bank accounts. Rather let us praise God for the real things of life, those permanent possessions of soul which abide after we "shuffle off this mortal coil." We can't take our gold with us to that "Far Country," for gold there is not legal tender. A grim humorist with sagacity even superior to his wit once advised his friend: "Do not take your gold with you when you die, because if you do, it will melt." Let us turn, then from the things that perish and praise God for the things that shall abide,—the soul-stuff of which poetry is made.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul," for sunsets and morning dawns! Behold the pearlaceous East boiling up like molten silver! The weight of the dark is no longer able to hold down the irky lid of mist. Gleaming swords of illumination puncture with great rifts the blanket of night, so that oncoming billows of dawn rush through every aperture, and climb up along the rafters of the sky, until they splash their foam in triumph against the dome of heaven and spill the bowl of the world full of day. The defeated clouds now break their ranks and emerge from the seething fusion, their torn and ragged garments dripping with liquid fire and glorified as if they had caught, from some upper celestial banquet chamber, the shed blood

STOMACH MISERY JUST VANISHES

NO INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA OR GAS IN FIVE MINUTES

A Little Diapepsin Now Will Make Your Out of Order Stomach Feel Fine—Digests All Your Food, Leaving Nothing to Ferment and Sour.

As there is often some one in your family who suffers an attack of indigestion or some form of stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy? This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula, plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin then you will readily see why it makes indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieves at once such miseries as Belching of gas, eructations of sour, undigested food, nausea, headaches, dizziness, constipation and other stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from indigestion and dyspepsia or an out of order stomach with the common, every-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of nervousness, gastritis, catarrh of the stomach or cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, gas and stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite with thorough digestion and without the slightest distress or misery of the stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.
