DON'T BE A "DEAD ONE," SAYS KEEFE

Nineteen hundred and twelve is almost upon the city of Pendleton, and the time draws near when Pendleton thinks back over the year just passed and takes stock of what she has done, and what has been left undone. The individual citizen if he is at all progressive does the same thing in his own case. We all profit by our mistakes as well as by the successful outcomes of our ventures.
 Pendleton has come before the eyes of the northwest and the country for the first time in a conspicuous manner through the great and phenomenal showing she made with her "Round-Up." For that showing every citizen of this city is responsible and every citizen of Pendleton has a right to his or her pride in the matter. The spirit manifest in that enterprise was a flash light of what Pendleton really has. It is up to Pendleton to maintain the same spirit in all the enterprises that are good for the city. It means a live city, a live people, and an enjoyable and attractive place in which to live.
 Every man will rise to the emergency, even the common place as well as the exceptional. The "Round-Up" was indeed an emergency and well did Pendleton rise to meet it, and all credit to them. Emergencies awake the latent strength of peoples and individuals, and for the rest of the time these peoples and individuals lie dormant, so dormant sometimes that the wag says they are "dead ones." However that is a harsh term to apply to this class, and probably it might be stated better that they had lapsed into a state of innocuous dereliction, or were hibernating. The "ringer" is there, the potentiality is there, all it needs is to be awakened and diverted to a fruitful end.
 The awakening of a large number of Pendleton's people can not come by having a "Round-Up" every day, that would be but a flash in the pan. What we need is the awakening of each individual through himself, his own realization of his responsibilities, and that awakening will react for the betterment of things, and will count. Every man in this city should come to realize that if he is a man he should do a man's work and enjoy a man's prerogatives. The satisfaction of being of service to the community wherein the man resides, of shouldering together with his neighbors the work and responsibilities that will always go with real manhood is a reward greater than mere monetary return.
 Be a live man, a real man, a Pendleton man. That's the slogan that should ever recur to the people of Pendleton. We were not created to live the hermit existence. The fun in life must be shared by us well as the serious problems if we are not to be lap-sided. Every man owes to himself relaxation, legitimate relaxation from the worries and cares of his routine business.
 The Pendleton Commercial club is the place for every man in Pendleton to be. It is his club, the legitimate sphere of his relaxation as well as his civic duties. Its end is the promotion of the material welfare of the city of Pendleton, the making of a more enjoyable and happier community, and the rounding out of the whole nature of the individual member. It is a clean place, a place where the head of a family can take his son, without fear of contamination. The mothers of Pendleton should see to it that their sons and husbands afford themselves the opportunities that the Pendleton Commercial club offers. Every side of the nature of the man is provided for now. The business matters serve as a splendid school for the young man, and he should participate in them. The social features are clean and legitimate, the members should relax in them at times.
 We in Pendleton have the reputation of life and vigor among our friends outside the city. Let us show the northwest that here is a city that has a live Commercial club of three hundred members. The city should have and support a club of that size at least. Then can the Commercial club of Pendleton make the outside world "sit up and take notice." Let every live man in the city sign his application for membership in this clean, live, Pendleton club. Let every wife and mother of the city urge upon the fathers and husbands of the city the support and interest that they owe to the city's club. They need have no fear that their husbands

SAYS ONE MAN COULD PLAY BASEBALL GAME ON PHOBOS

Chicago.—Prof. E. R. Moulton of the University of Chicago said one man, provided he could live in a place without atmosphere, is all that would be required to play a baseball game on Phobos, one of the two moons of Mars. He said: "Our one-man team would first take the position of pitcher and throw the ball horizontally. The ball would go all the way around the moon. He would then have time to get a bat and strike at it. If he missed it he could take his three strikes, then put on his mask, gloves and chest protector and catch himself out when the ball came around the fourth time.
 "In case he hit the ball and it bounded he could play the part of an infielder by picking the ball up as it came bounding around the moon. He then could throw to first and catch himself out on the base as the ball came around again. If he hit a fly in place of a grounder he might draw on his glove and, playing the part of the center fielder, catch himself out.
 "A strong batter might make a home run. This would mean a home run. This would mean that he struck the ball so hard that it went beyond the attraction of this moon and struck on the planet Mars. It would be what we call over the fence."

It was well attended by schoolers who bid freely on pillows, cook aprons and such articles that they were unable to make.

GLACIER OUT IN THE COLD FOR NOBODY WANTS IT

Washington.—Does anybody want a first class glacier? It is in the Glacier National Park in Montana; it covers about 17,000 acres and from all reports it is one of the nicest glaciers there are. The Northern Pacific Railroad company owns the glacier but wants the Interior Department to take it. The department refuses to have anything to do with it.
 When the government created the Glacier National park congress authorized the secretary of the interior to trade to the owners of lands within the area selected for park purposes lands in other sections of the national domain. The railroad company owned a great deal of this acreage and when it came to settling up the railroad included the glacier in the total of its properties and asked the government to treat it as all other holdings.
 There is a law that glaciers cannot be considered in the same category as agricultural and forest lands and so officials of the land office refused to give the company anything for the ice. The railroad replied that as there is good land under the ice the department should consider it as acreage.
 WATER LILIES SAVE LIFE.

Savio swam to the shore, but Gonzales clung to a large bunch of water lilies, drifting six miles in three hours. He was barely conscious and unable to move when found by a rescue party.
