

GOV. WEST BOOSTS DIRECT LEGISLATION

ALSO OTHER OREGON PRODUCTS TO EASTERNERS

Tells People of Cleveland, Ohio, of Progressive Plans, by Which Citizens of This State Directly Administer Their State Affairs.

Gov. Oswald West of Oregon, the state which blazed the trail for the initiative and referendum, is distinctly a product of direct legislation and the independence it has bred in the voters of Oregon, says a story in the Cleveland (Ohio) Press.

West, in Cleveland Friday with seven other western states governors, is an enthusiastic direct legislation advocate. He's seen what the initiative and referendum has done for Oregon, and doesn't hesitate to declare direct legislation the best thing that ever happened for the state. He says his own election was due to the independence of the voters and their distrust of party bosses.

Gratuitous Due to the I-R.

"The initiative and referendum has made Oregon one of the greatest states in the union," said West. "The state has grown and developed more under direct legislation than ever before. Nothing has arisen to make the people regret adopting the initiative and referendum. It's a blessing in every way."

West, young and comparatively unknown before his election, went on the ticket as a democrat in a strong republican state, after the party bosses had secured the nomination of the men they had picked in a pre-election assembly. The voters distrusted the machine leaders and elected West.

"Direct legislation is the thing for Ohio, as it has been for Oregon," said West. "Your constitutional convention should see that the principles are incorporated into the constitution with percentages low enough to make them easily workable. All this talk about the initiative and referendum opening the way for undesirable legislation is bosh. The people of Oregon have proved their intelligence, and so will the people of Ohio."

A Five-Sixths Majority. Oregon likes the I. and R. so well that five-sixths of the voters would vote for retaining the principles, West said.

"Only the political bosses are against direct legislation," he continued. "It has been shown in Oregon that it will annihilate the best machine in existence. The bosses didn't know this in Oregon, but they know it now. That's one of the blessings of the I. and R."

"Oregon has not had too many elections since the adoption of the direct legislative system. We've had many questions decided in the last few years, but they were all questions the people wanted decided quickly. There were some laws the people wanted, and they got them. We've decided more questions in the last few years than we'll vote on in the next ten. Now that we've got what we want, there won't be so many questions voted upon."

Will Benefit Ohio. West was enthusiastic over Ohio's chances to get direct legislation. Nothing could benefit Ohio more than direct legislation, he said:

"Why, even the corporate interests are coming around for direct legislation out our way," said West.

"Industries are making more money than ever before. We have built more miles of railroads since we got the I. and R. than in 10 years previous. It's a great thing. There's no question about it with us."

"One thing the I. and R. has shown is that you can't fool the people. Some corporations tried it, but they couldn't put anything over on the voters. The people have shown they know what they are voting on every time. The man who says the people don't know how to govern themselves and make laws should come out to Oregon. They would change their minds."

"The recall makes us behave. We know the people will out us if we don't do what's right. And as a result we do what's right. The recall has never been worked on state officials."

Gov. John Burke of North Dakota looks for his state to have the initiative and referendum soon. One branch of the legislature has already provided for the principles there.
