The home of good pictures. A classy program for Friday's change. "Who's Who." Vitagraph. The people of this town like a good comedy, and they are no different from the rest of folks. "Who's Who," shows us "What's What." This refined Vitagraph comedy is it.
"When California Was Won." Kalem. The story of a great day in California history. This production was made on Dead Man's Island, where part of the action originally took place.

HURLED TO DEATH DOWN MINE SHAFT

Kellogg, Ida.—Clarence Anderson, age 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Anderson, was instantly killed in the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine. He was struck by a timber skip and hurled 100 feet down the shaft. The skull was fractured. Deceased had been employed as a skip tender for the last year and worked on No. 11 level. According to witnesses, Anderson stepped across the chute in front of the rapidly descending timber. He had been watching a companion at work. The skip stopped almost instantly after striking Anderson, but men could not catch him in time to prevent the fall. He pitched headlong down the shaft. The coroner was notified and will hold an inquest. The victim was a member of the Industrial union, under whose auspices the funeral will be held.

IRATE MOTHER BALKS CUPID.

Causes Arrest of Daughter and Halts Marriage.
La Grande, Ore.—Miss Houghton, age 15, residing at Wallowa, was arrested at the request of her mother, Miss Houghton and J. R. Workman, a youth, attempted to get married here, but on account of parental interference and publicity the plans were forestalled. The girl is being held awaiting her mother's arrival to take charge of her, though the young man has been released as no charges had been preferred on which he could be held.

RECEIVES 27 SHOTS IN FACE.

Toppenish Man Gets Misses Though Stovepipe.
Toppenish, Wash.—Jesse Naylor, who lives north of Toppenish, was the victim of a peculiar accident several days ago, from which he is just recovering, when a gun in the hands of his brother, Bert Naylor, was accidentally discharged. The brothers were in different tents at the same camping place, the walls of the two tents and a thick stovepipe being between the muzzle of the gun and Jesse Naylor when it was discharged. Practically the entire load of shot, however, penetrated the thickness of the tent and lodged in the young man's shoulder and face, from which 27 shot were removed. The brother was hanging up the shotgun, of the automatic type, when it was discharged, the "safety" having not been thrown.

JOY OVER WORK IS FATAL.

Seattle Man Dies Just After Obtaining Employment.
Seattle.—Excess of joy at obtaining work, after an illness of some weeks, is believed by the coroner's office to have been the cause of the death of James M. Dock, 56 years of age. Medlock, a laborer returned home early in the evening to tell his wife that he had found employment. He was bubbling over with pleasure at the news and said he would go in to the yard and get some wood so his wife could prepare a meal for him. The wife heard the falling wood and when her husband did not enter the house she investigated, finding him lying across the porch. Death was due to apoplexy.

Death Ends Fifty-Year Romance.

McKeesport, Pa.—A romance of more than fifty years developed here with the death of Miss Kate Maharris, 70. She was betrothed to Daniel Frantz in the spring of 1861 and shortly afterward Frantz enlisted. At the battle of the wilderness he was fatally wounded and instructed his comrades to send a lock of his hair back to his sweetheart. For fifty years Miss Maharris kept her promise to the man she lived. When she was buried she wore the dress she had made for her wedding day. The lock of hair and a red rose which Frantz had given her just before he went to the war were also buried with her.
W. Morgan Shuster did his best; proved himself a man.
