Masquerade ball at German hall next Saturday night, December 30th.

At the Grand.
Amateur night tonight. "The Good Ship Nancy Lee," the new bill produced last night pleased the audience more than any bill yet put on by the Austin Company. Austin & Bates as the Dutch and Irish sailors are at their best and each of them get their share of laughs. The whole cast is perfect in this bill. The two reels of pictures, one a western drama and the other a comedy, are some of the best ever shown in the city. Monday the company will present "Vacation Time." Something a-awl from any bill yet presented. Special holiday matinee, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, 2:30. Don't miss amateur night tonight.

Further Use for the Whale.
Baltimore—Laden with 700 tons of dried whale meat, the British steamship Boethic, Captain William Cross, is lying off pier 6, lower Canton. The Boethic enjoys the distinction of being the first sealer and whaler to arrive in these parts for many years. She comes from St. John's, Newfoundland, and the cargo is consigned to a local fertilizing concern.
The vessel has a history. Captain Robert Bartlett, who sailed with Commodore Peary when the latter discovered the north pole, was at one time master of the Boethic when that ship was used by Harry P. Whitney in a three months' hunting trip in the frozen Arctic. Lately she has been used by the Hudson Bay Fur company as a supply ship between Montreal and the far north.

MORE COLD WEATHER FOR MIDDLE WEST
Minneapolis, Dec. 29.—Weather forecasters predict an extreme ice wave is due to strike the middle west within a day or two. The temperature is forty-two below zero at Prince Albert, Sask. The low temperature is moving southward.

HOBBLE SKIRT CAUSE OF STREET BLOCKADE
Girl Cannot Get Foot on Step and Holds Up Car Traffic Five Minutes.
Pittsburgh.—It was the hobble skirt that did it. It wasn't the girl's fault at all. Miss Bell Johnson didn't want to hold up the Fifth Avenue street car line until cars were lined up for two blocks in the East End district, while motormen, conductors and shoppers grumbled and growled, but that is just what happened.
Miss Johnson and her friend, also hobbled, signaled a South Highland car at Ivy street, at the hour when hundreds were hurrying downtown. The friend managed to get on the car but the principal in the little comedy couldn't get her foot on the step.
So there she stood, one hand on the rail, one foot in the air, pleadingly looking up into the face of the conductor, who stood with his hands on the bell cord ready to give it the two jerks which would send the car ahead.
The motorman was fuming in his cab on the front platform. He was already two minutes behind schedule, and cars behind were crowding him.
The conductor offered to get off and lift the young woman aboard, but she indignantly refused. Cars behind stopped, and traffic was blocked.
For nearly five minutes they stood thus, the girl refusing to be assisted and yet refusing to let go the rail, so the conductor was compelled to refrain from giving the signal.
Persons in the cars behind began to inquire about the trouble. Conductors came running up with all sorts of suggestions. Finally, the ever-present small boy on the sidewalk yelled: "Ah, cheer! Why don't cher lift 'em up?"
The girl caught the idea. Grasping the light hobble skirt with both hands, she gingerly raised it, displaying a liberal extent of shapely silk-stocked ankles and climbed aboard the car.
"Ding, ding," went the bell, and the blockade was lifted.

Boat Rescued.
