The Famous Rayo Lamp

The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.

The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.

There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.

Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."

The Rayo is made of solid brass, with handsome nickel finish—an ornament anywhere.

Ask your dealer for a Rayo lamp; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of the

ATHLETES SAVE LIVES BY DIVING IN ICY WATER

Two Skaters Drowned, But Six Are Rescued by Daring Students and Revived.

Melrose, Mass.—Two boys were drowned and six others required medical attendance to save their lives when thirty skaters were thrown into the water of Daw's Pond by the breaking of thin ice. The drowned were Sargent Flagg, aged twelve years, and Hugh McIntyre of Greenwood.

Only the heroic work of young athletes who leaped into the pond and dragged out the struggling boys prevented greater loss of life. Among the rescuers were Clarence Wanamaker and Edward McCarthy, Dartmouth students; Donald Hanson of Harvard, Elmer Wanamaker, captain of the Melrose high school hockey team, and Dettmar Jones of the Massachusetts agricultural college.

Jones dived repeatedly into the deepest of the water and brought back a boy each time. He also recovered the body of Flagg.

The accident happened at the close of the annual hockey game of the Melrose high school team and the Melrose high alumni. One of the boys, Hugh McIntyre, stepped on an ice cake which became separated from the main body and floated with him into open water. Many had gathered around, intent on extending aid, when the ice beneath them gave way, throwing them into water ten feet deep.

Amid screams and cries for help the young men, who had been attending the hockey game, jumped to the rescue.

Hall Teams Exonerated.

Cincinnati, Jan. 6.—The troublesome ticket scalping scandal that followed the world's series in New York and Philadelphia last October was given its quietus by the National Baseball commission here today.

While the commission gathered enough evidence to assure it that wholesale ticket scalping took place in both towns, yet this evidence indicated that neither the New York Nationals nor Philadelphia owners, managers, players or employees were in collusion with the scalpers.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY IS FORMED

planting of the Astoria enterprise at the mouth of the Columbia, was an important link in the chain of title which the United States claimed and successfully proved to the Oregon country south of the 49th parallel.

After the departure of the Astorians from the Columbia the trail from the Rocky mountains to the Pacific by way of the Snake river and Burnt and Powder rivers and the Grand Ronde was not used for some years, except by detached parties. But in 1818 another party of fur traders and trappers had passed over it under the lead of Donald Mackenzie, who had been a member of the Astor party but had joined the Northwest company of Canada. The career of Donald Mackenzie has not been fairly written in history, in all probability. He was a wonderful man in his dealings with Indians and was a man of great physical strength and endurance. If he had differences with Wilson Price Hunt they were those common to the different dispositions of men, and incident to his own really superior experience in the field of life of the fur trade to that of Mr. Hunt himself. He was selected by the Northwest company to return to the Columbia and take entire charge of their interior business, as distinguished from that of the coast, and he it was who reorganized the trade from the different forts or posts and who himself undertook to lead and carry on the Snake river trade which as yet was undeveloped and became one of their richest fields. He succeeded in the wonderful feat of ascending the Snake river from the Lewiston country to the neighborhood of Huntington through the terrible box canyon. This he did in the month of April, 1819, without a mishap, showing the skill of the Canadian voyageurs in the management of the batteaus used in the fur trade of the earlier days on the Columbia. He made a winter trip on snow shoes from his trappers on the Portneuf in the dead of winter across the plains of southern Idaho and through the Powder river valley to Fort Nez Percés on the Columbia. He returned across the Rocky mountains in 1822 and was not seen again on the Columbia.

With his going the Hudson's Bay company took the place of the Northwest company west of the Rockies. For one year Finan Macdonald led the Snake country expedition eastward from Fort Nez Percés through this valley. But for two years succeeding the parties went in and out by way of the Bitterroot valley of Montana. In the fall of 1825 travel was resumed through Powder river and Burnt river under the leadership of Peter Skene Ogden, who was one of the most forceful men ever in charge of the fur trade on the Columbia. He endured hardships that would have soon driven another from the field and he has left his name in Utah as a permanent record of his ability. He first gave name to Mount Shasta and to the Humboldt river region. His name is honored in Oregon, where he died in 1854. He continued in charge of the Snake country business until 1829, when it became necessary for him to lead a party to California.

In 1829 John Work or Wark succeeded Mr. Ogden and continued in charge until the coming of Nathaniel J. Wyeth from Boston, who built Fort Hall at the junction of the Snake with the Portneuf, and the Hudson's Bay company bought him out and afterward for a long number of years transacted their business from that fort and from Fort Boise on the river of that name. The use of the Oregon trail from 1834 on is another chapter and belongs to another period.

The fur trade along the coast led the Yankee sailors to bring their trading vessels to the Pacific and directly occasioned the discovery of the mouth of the Columbia river by Captain Gray. The Astor enterprise hastened the opening of the fur trade on the river and directly occasioned the opening of the way across the plains by which the Union Pacific railroad now crosses and really opened the way for the pioneers who settled Oregon. In this way the fur trade was directly responsible for the title of Oregon passing to the United States.

The use of the Oregon Trail was first by the Indians from time immemorial, then by the Hunt party on foot, then by the trappers on horse back, then by the pioneers in wagons, then by the railroad coach and Pullman car, and now by the auto.

NO OPIATES NO NARCOTICS FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND

A COMMON COLD neglected may quickly into GROUP, BRONCHITIS, or PNEUMONIA which often means a sudden fatality. Keep FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND always in the house and give at first sign of a cold. Refuse substitutes.

John Parsons, Stewart, Ohio, writes: "We use FOLEY'S Honey and Tar Compound as our best and only cough remedy. It never fails to cure any of my seven children of cough. My 2-month-old baby has had a most severe cough which our Doctor said he could not cure and that Baby would surely die. Several of our relations and neighbors had gathered to witness the ending of the child's life. Two bottles of FOLEY'S Honey and Tar Compound cured the child and he is alive and well today."
