NEPHEW IS NOW HUSBAND.
Alvin E. Allen Marries His Aunt's Wife's Father's Grandfather.
Walla Walla, Wash.—When Alvin E. Allen married Mamie R. Stone he became the husband of his aunt and his grand father became his father-in-law. His wife's father, Allen's grandfather, became her grandfather by marriage and the entanglements can be carried into a hopeless maze. Allen, who is but 18 years of age, had to have his grandfather appointed his guardian so the marriage could be performed under the laws of this state. As there is a foster relationship somewhere in the mixup, Allen and his wife are not real blood relation, but they will have a hard time telling just what their kinship is and its extent.

LOW TEMPERATURE RECORDS ARE BROKEN

snow makes the streets impassable, school will probably continue for the grade pupils.

Wires Are Down.
Wires are down between here and Portland and such messages as have found their way in from that city during the day have been routed by way of Spokane. The telegraphic news of the East Oregonian is necessarily brief because of this condition.

The low temperature last night was responsible for a great many frozen water pipes and the plumbers, in consequence, have been the busiest men in the city today. In several instances gas pipes have been reported frozen, the East Oregonian being one of the sufferers from this inconvenience. The gas was off in the mechanical rooms of this plant all morning, making it impossible for the linotypes to run, and hence holding up all operations.

STEP UP LADIES! PROPOSE AND BE MARRIED FREE

Illinois Justice Offers Special Leap-Year Inducements to Old Maids.
Evanston, Ill.—There will be no dearth of wedding bells in this aristocratic city during the present leap year if Justice J. F. Boyer succeeds in his efforts to get husbands for old maids.

When Justice Boyer heard of the offer of an Elgin Justice to marry free any woman who "pops the question," he decided he would offer additional inducements to Evanston women.

The magistrate declares he will marry free any woman over 25 years who does the proposing, and he will take her word for it.

Old maids over 35 he will marry free whether they propose or not, and he will also marry gratis couples over 50 years.

Justice Boyer declares there are 2,400 more unmarried women in Evanston than eligible men.

AT THE PICTURE SHOWS

Orpheum.
Big Vitagraph special in three reels for Tuesday's change.

"Vanity Fair." Vitagraph. In three reels. Suggested by the great novel, "Vanity Fair," by William Makepeace Thackeray, the greatest satirist and delineator of character and society of the early eighteenth century. This supremely magnificent portrayal is incomparably dramatic and scintillating.

It depicts society and the battle of Waterloo.

"The Last Horse." Lubin. Sam, the stable boy, worked up a great scheme for separating people from their money by means of a horse which he painted to correspond with the description of an animal for which there was a reward of $200.

"Mr. Inquisitive." Lubin. A side splitting farce. Mr. Inquisitive believed in investigating everything that he didn't understand.

The Pastime.
The home of good pictures and good music. Tuesday's program:

"The Politician's Dream." Vitagraph. A Vitagraph comedy with Bunny as the politician and Miss Flora Finch as the widow. The politician dreamt that he had been nominated for the mayoralty of New York City and every thing was coming his way. Parades and dinners, and all the glories of a campaign were his when a telegram comes telling him that his rival is going to marry the widow that he is very much in love with.

"At the Stroke of Twelve." Essanay. A drama of love and business life.

"Saved by the Pony Express." Selig. Our first scene shows cowboys and their sweethearts, enjoying a quadrille on horseback. "Happy" Jack, a practical joker rides off with Belle Archer, the sweetheart of Jim.

"Cowboy Life." American Pathé. A film of exceeding interest.

"The Kloday Equilibrist." Few vaudeville stunts are as interesting.

At the Grand.
