Sumpter, Ore.—As the result of permitting the use of firearms by children, William Morris, aged 27, a painter by occupation, residing at Burnt River, is lying at the hospital here suffering from a dangerous bullet wound in the breast. The shooting was the result of an accident and the careless handling of a 22-special rifle by Freddie, the 9-year-old son of Lemuel King, who resides on a farm at Audrey on a tributary of Burnt River. Morris and the boy were visiting another place on the South Fork and were hunting rabbits. A rabbit started and the little boy in his eagerness to shoot brought his gun around in order to get aim but pulled the trigger just in time to shoot Morris, who was standing a short distance away. The bullet entered the left breast and passed within an inch of the heart lodging on the right side from where it was extracted. Both lungs are perforated, but the attending physician is of the opinion that the injured man will recover.
