CAPTURE THE "WILD MAN OF THE ADIRONDACKS"

Strange Individual Who Has Terrorized Mountain Lake Section Driven from Cave by the Cold.

Malone, N. Y.—For four years or more a "wild man" has inhabited the Adirondacks in the vicinity of Lake Kashaqua and Onchlotia and has been the object of fear, alarm and speculation, terrorizing people by his raids and strange appearance from time to time.

He has lived in a cave in the woods and at early morn or at twilight has shown himself searching for food, usually getting it from the garbage barrels at the sanitarium at Kashaqua.

The extreme cold drove the man to the mill of the Onchlotia Dock and Coal company, where he was captured and taken to the county jail to serve as a vagrant.

He gave the name of John Hunston and later said he was John Coons. He is a German and says he came to New York in 1884.

"The old man of the Adirondacks" has florid complexion, red stubby beard and blue eyes. He wore a pair of shoes that weighed eight and one-half pounds. When captured he had on five coats, three shirts, three pairs of trousers and several pairs of overalls. The man says he was once in the Albany penitentiary, but will tell nothing more of his past life.

The authorities are in a quandary to know what to do with him. The man appears fifty years old.

WOULDN'T WED A JAY. Californian Jilted by Woman Whose Divorce Expenses He Paid.

Columbus, Kan.—Arter he had paid all expenses of her divorce, purchased tickets for her and her mother to Holtville, Cal., where the marriage was to take place, and agreed to allow her mother to live with them, Mrs. Minnie May de Witt quarreled with J. A. Ray and refused to marry him.

Mrs. de Witt is pretty and 18. She saw Ray's name in a matrimonial paper and began corresponding, learning that he was 42 and owner of a fine irrigated farm near El Centro. Ray sent a check toward the expense of the wedding outfit and arrived to claim his bride. But Mrs. de Witt said he was a "jay" and that she would not walk down the street with him, let alone be married to him.

IRRIGATION MEETING FAVORS UMATILLA

ACCLAIMS RATHER THAN RECORDS ITS APPROVAL

Enemies of West Extension Are Prominent on Floor of Congress in Session at Portland—Experts Deliver Addresses.

In giving an account of yesterday's session of the Oregon Irrigation congress, meeting in Portland, the Oregon Journal, in part, printed the following:

Denying that the Coe, Furnish or Sloan interests are behind the project, J. C. Hoskins, rancher of Echo, this morning swung sentiment of the Oregon Irrigation congress in favor of affording relief for a tract of 69,000 acres of arid land in Umatilla county by granting to the owners water rights to which the government now holds control. The congress did not officially go on record in the matter but the sentiment was expressed by the ovation tendered the speaker after his impassioned plea.

Hoskins stated emphatically that the owners of these 69,000 acres are not opposed to the west extension of the Umatilla government project, as seems to be the prevailing opinion, but that they ask only for the privilege of using the waters of the upper Umatilla river for irrigating their lands, after which it may be drained into the west extension reservoirs for usage again on lands of a lower level.

Ditch is Wanted.
Hoskins classed himself among those who had been "scrapping" over the West Umatilla extension, and said he had appeared before the federal officials at the various hearings, but explained that in no way should the impression prevail that the "scrappers" are opposed to the proposed extension.

"All we want," exclaimed Hoskins, "is the privilege of building a ditch; we have figured out the cost and are ready to bond the property for the funds required. By securing such a ditch we will be able to water these acres and make them support 7500 people instead of 135 as at present."

Cost of Ditch.
Hoskins explained that private engineers had been engaged to estimate the cost of a ditch as that desired and the cost will not be more than $25 per acre. He contended that the water would bring the land to a high state of productiveness, whereas under existing conditions it is worth very little. The project could easily be carried out, he explained. He denied that he or the other settlers were in any way interested with the projects of W. J. Furnish, Frank Sloan or Dr. Coe, who are interested in neighboring properties.

C. L. Smith, the agricultural expert of the O-W. R. & N. company, who spoke yesterday at the afternoon session, rallied to the support of Mr. Hoskins, saying that in his opinion the lands referred to should be given water without delay, as the larger percentage of these lands were under cultivation and hence their productiveness could be increased at once and to greater advantage than raw land.

Sam Hill spoke on good roads and emphasized the efforts of Governor West in that direction in this state. He said good roads are as important to the country as are water, for without roads the farmer is at a heavy disadvantage in getting his products to market.

"I am not a politician," said Mr. Hill; "I am a republican, but you have in this state a democrat, a young man who has taken the right stand, and I want you to stand by him. He is solving the problem of better roads and he should have all the support you can lend him."

Solution is Offered.

"I have found that the American farmer pays twice as much as he farmer in Europe to get his products to market, and that is one of the causes of our high cost of living. I have found a method of road construction the cost of which is not to exceed $7500 per mile, and it is not patented. Good roads will solve the problem of how to get the people of the city to move into the country. Give them roads, telephones and other comforts and accommodations of city life and they will answer to the call of the rural districts."

W. W. Patch, Klamath reclamation engineer, showed the results obtained by irrigation in that district, explaining that the average gross returns on irrigated land are approximately 20 per cent. Potatoes had brought the best results, the net receipts per acre very conservatively estimated, being $75 per acre.

How to Start In.
"He held that to start successfully on irrigated land the settler should have sufficient means to stock the farm and continue operations for a year with very small returns."

F. F. Hinshaw of the geological survey explained the work done by that part of the government service and stated that much remains yet to be done, particularly in the interest of irrigation projects.

Governor West opened the congress with a strong talk for fair and square treatment of the settler and all interests. He pointed to his policy in dealing with irrigation projects in this state and said that he would stand by these policies for they meant the square deal to everybody concerned. He invited his critics to state their views and answer any and all. Under all circumstances, he contended, must the man who goes on the land to make a home be protected.

C. L. Smith, agricultural expert for the O-W. R. & N., spoke along the same vein and expressed his regret that in all the publicity literature the dollar sign was altogether too much in evidence.

E. G. Hopsom, supervising engineer of the reclamation service, for Oregon, California and Nevada, read a splendid paper on irrigation projects, "After Construction is Completed."

Permanent Organization.

He held that the projects should not only give the means of securing the water but should also, to obtain the best results, place the lands in shape for the man who is poorly equipped to take up the matter of cultivating the soil under the new conditions from the beginning because of the fact that the people are not educated how to take care of the irrigated land.

Permanent organization was effected.

SURGEON REMOVES APPENDIX FROM HIS OWN BODY

San Francisco—Dr. Bertram F. Alden, chief surgeon of the French hospital, is recovering from an operation unique in the history of surgery, that of removing from his own body the vermiform appendix.

Dr. Alden injected a spinal anesthetic, and with his own hand wielded the scalpel, making the incisions necessary for cutting out the troublesome sac, and gained prompt relief from a severe attack of appendicitis.

A New York judge refused an actress a divorce.

Could Not Straighten Up

A Peculiar Condition Removed

Some time ago I was troubled with pains in the back and kidneys, at times could not straighten up after bending over. Came to the conclusion that it was my kidneys. Read Dr. Kilmer's advertisement and made up my mind I would try Swamp-Root. During the time taking the contents of two bottles I passed two gall stones of quite good size. Today I am free from pains in the back and kidneys for Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root removed all the difficulty, and I can now go about my work and have no trouble with my back or kidneys. I will gladly recommend Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root to any one suffering from kidney or liver trouble. You are at liberty to publish this if you so desire.
