A CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE IS FORMING

TWO TEAMS ARE ALREADY ORGANIZED FOR GAMES

O-W. R. & N. Employees and Local Lodge of Elks Have Entered Field and Others Are Expected to Follow in Near Future.

Not only is it very probable that the city will see league ball this season but it is also likely that a number of local amateur teams will disport themselves on the diamond. Already employees of the O-W. R. & N. company have organized, the Elks are planning on putting a team in the field and it is predicted that other teams will be formed to perfect a city league. It is the intention to arrange games for the Sundays on which the league team is absent from the city, thus enabling local fans to see one game a week.

The railroad employees met last night and perfected an organization which issues a bold defi to any other bunch of horsehide heavers in this vicinity. The battery will consist of Joiner, telegraph operator, catcher, Wissler, bill clerk, pitcher, Walter Rose, cashier, 1st base, Babe Beam, freight warehouseman, short stop, R. J. Brush, transcontinental freight inspector, 2nd base, Pat McKee, yardmaster, 3rd base, Less Barr, car clerk, right field, Copeland, baggage clerk, center field, and Bill Dietz, night ticket clerk, left fielder. All of the men have had experience in the national pastime and, inasmuch as all are off on Sunday afternoons, they were encouraged to form and thus secure a little recreation.

The Elks are much interested in the organization of a team in order to raise money for their trip to the Portland convention. With Keefe and Sturgis as a battery, they will have a nucleus for a classy aggregation. It is their purpose to play not only local teams but to meet Elk teams from Walla Walla, La Grande and other cities.

JACK LONDON SHIPS "A. B." WIFE GOES WITH NOVELIST

Writer Who Voyaged Into the South Seas on Sloop Snark Will Realize Ambition to Round Horn as Common Sailor.

Baltimore, Md.—With his wife accompanying him, Jack London will satisfy his ambition to round the Horn in a square rigged Yankee clipper. He has signed as an "A. B." and will serve as one of the crew of the Dirigo, which will sail for Seattle with a cargo of coal this week.

When London married his present wife in Chicago in 1905, he had been divorced just one day. The Illinois statute provides that divorced persons must remain unmarried one year following the granting of the divorce, and it was declared that London's second marriage was illegal, until Judge Julian W. Mack, now a member of the commerce court, ruled that the law did not apply to persons who came from other states and were married in Illinois.

London declared before this decision was made that he would marry Charmion Kittredge, his bride, in every state in the union if that course would make their marriage immune from attack.

Many of London's stories have dealt with the sea and with sailors, quite as much as with love affairs, and in his writings are included several expressions of sentiment supposed to relate to one or the other or both of his wives.

PERSIANS RESORT TO CANNIBALISM DURING FAMINE

American Woman Sends News of Starving Thousands and Appeals to Red Cross.

Washington.—The culminating horror of the famine in Persia is described in a letter received by the Persian-American Educational society from Dr. Susan I. Moody, formerly of Chicago, now of Teheran.

"Fathers are eating their children and the children eat each other," says Dr. Moody.

On receipt of her story of inconceivable cannibalism, the Persian-American Educational society wrote to Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the Red Cross society, and appealed to that organization to aid in the relief of the 40,000 people in the province of Hamalan, who are facing starvation.

Dr. Moody says she longs for America to rise and lend help in Persia's desperate trouble. She says also that W. Morgan Shuster of Washington, former treasurer-general of Persia, would have relieved the situation if Persia had stood by him, and that his dismissal was to a great extent caused by the grafters who were living off the public treasury.
