PREFER U.S. TO OROZCO REGIME

Prominent Mexican Says American Intervention Would Be Far Better.

FEARS FALL OF MADERO

Declares Mexican President Has Only Four Thousand Men to Defend Capital and Doubts Loyalty of Many of These.

El Paso, Texas, March 25.—Declaring that intervention by the United States would be better than General Pascual Orozco the revolutionary leader as president, General Villanueva, who was a fighter under President Madero in the former revolt, gave the United Press his views on the Mexican conditions.

He said: "The situation is grave. General Orozco is now headed toward Mexico City. "President Madero has only 4,000 soldiers and it is doubtful if they are all loyal. "It is a question where General Orozco will be stopped. If President Madero can stop Orozco, all is good. If not, American intervention will be better than an Orozco regime.

The bereavement is rendered more heavy to the parents because it leaves them childless, two other children having been buried in the last few years.

POLITICS IN UNIVERSITIES

Carnegie Board Finds Many Flaws in Educational Institutions.

New York, March 25.—"Poor schools turn out three times as many lawyers as the country needs; one-half of the states have no adequate educational requirements for admission to the bar; politics still plays a part in the appointment and dismissal of state university boards, presidents and professors and lobbying for legislative funds and in a general sense public obligation to the cause of education seems stronger, and more widespread than before." The foregoing are some of the findings of the sixth annual report of the Andrew Carnegie foundation for advancement of teaching which was issued today.

JUDGES ARE NOW RECALLED BY BOSSES

So Charges Connolly in Showing-up Alleged Crookedness

New York, N. Y., March 25.—Judges of the highest courts in the United States are selected for conservatism is not for worse. Conservatism always meant the support of corporate property rights at the utmost, as against individual rights and public rights, is the charge of C. P. Connolly, in Everybody's Magazine.

Connolly says: "A federal judge in New York fined a rich man $25,000 for defrauding the government of $1,400,000. The same judge gave a minor offender three months in prison. The rich man walked out of the court room with but of $1,375,000 under his arm." Connolly says that the recall of judges is practically in effect now, but it is in the hands of political machines, controlling nominations. Justice Lewis, Connolly says, decided against the trusts and the politicians "recalled" him.

It is not known what action will be taken next.

The miner's committee announces their willingness to abandon the demand for a complete schedule, by districts, and all demands affecting peace makers. Enoch Edwards, spokesman for the miners, says they will not abandon their demand for a minimum wage of five shillings per day for adults and two shillings for minors. He says the miners have made all possible concessions and now want to see the employers make some concessions.

RALPH JAMES MAY BE MENTALLY UNBALANCED

When Ralph James, the seventeen year old boy arrested last Thursday after taking a fling at high finance and sleuthing, and who was released after his mother had settled the bad checks which he passed, developed a belief that he was endowed with the art of heading and attempted to practice upon a sleek neighbor's child, his mother became alarmed and summoned the officers again. As a result the boy is now in the county jail and bids fair to be sent to the asylum as the officials have come to the belief that his peculiar actions are the result of an unbalanced mind.

Young James was released Friday after his mother had adjusted the difficulties into which the boy had become involved and after employment had been found for him. However, when he was taken home and learned that one of the neighbor children was ill, he immediately announced that he could cure the little invalid by rubbing his hands over it. His action frightened his mother and she notified the officers, who secured a taxicab and sped out to Riverside where the boy was taken into custody again.
