The huge stone was put in place by Chief Contractor Johnson and in this work he was assisted by his two foremen, A. J. Anderson and L. M. Erickson.

Tribute to Mayor Matlock.

At the last moment, Col. J. H. Raley was commissioned to represent Mayor W. F. Matlock, the city chief executive being unable in his crippled condition to mount the platform. In representing the mayor, Col. Raley paid a great tribute to him for the part he had played in the securing of the state hospital here. He characterized Mr. Matlock as "the father of the state hospital here. He characterized his efforts twenty years ago while he was a member of the state senate to secure a hospital for eastern Oregon, which efforts started the activities which eventually accomplished that end.

No Politics With Steiner.

Supt. R. E. L. Steiner, head of the state hospital, took occasion yesterday to defend himself against the charges that he had allowed politics to influence him in his efforts to secure the Eastern Oregon state hospital. "My labors in behalf of this institution have been solely in behalf of the unfortunates for whom the state must provide," he said in part, "and I have not been influenced one small particle by politics. Such an institution should never be mixed with politics and I say, God forbid that the day shall ever come when politics will enter the door of this hospital."

Dr. Steiner, besides emphasizing the superiority of the eastern Oregon institution over others in the country, also paid a high tribute to the delegation which Umatilla county and eastern Oregon which worked so hard to secure the legislation necessary for the establishment of the hospital, mentioning particularly Dr. C. J. Smith, Dr. W. J. Cole, L. L. Mann, C. A. Barrett, J. N. Burgess and S. D. Peterson of this county. Henry McKinney of Baker, Brooks of Malheur and others who had been foremost in the fight.

Not a "Bughouse."

Dr. Steiner furthermore appealed to the press, the school children and the citizens to refrain from speaking of the institution as a "bughouse," a "dippy house" or a "crazy house," declaring the inmates of such a hospital to be the most unfortunate and pitiful people on earth.

Robinson's Address.

J. F. Robinson, president of the Commercial association, made the last address of the day, briefly expressing the appreciation of Pendleton for the efforts of the state board and dwelling upon the importance of the institution to the state. His address in entirety follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of the Commercial association of Pendleton, I desire to thank the state board for the honor it has conferred on our association by inviting us to take charge of the laying of the cornerstone of an institution that means so much to Pendleton and eastern Oregon.

When the citizens of this great state of Oregon elected you, gentlemen, to the high office which you have been chosen to fill, they had confidence in your good judgment and ability, and I wish to assert emphatically to you, gentlemen of the state board, that you in turn showed good judgment by locating the Eastern Oregon Hospital in Pendleton—"The biggest city of its size in the West."

We freely admit that this state institution means a great deal to the city of Pendleton. On the other hand we confidently assert that the city of Pendleton means a great deal to the state of Oregon. The location of our city, its railroad facilities and its various activities are the cause of bringing annually to Pendleton a large number of people, not only from Oregon, but from all sections of the country.

We are proud to know that we shall be able to point out to all these an institution which must forever stand as a monument to the greatness of the people of Oregon. It is therefore more than local pride which we feel on this great occasion. Rather do we feel a pride of being citizens of a state which has ever shown itself actively solicitous for the highest welfare of all its people, be they fortunate or unfortunate. This cornerstone not only marks the beginning of a great institution; it is a milestone in the progress of a free and enlightened people toward a greater and broader humanity.

Some one has said: "He builds for nought who builds beneath the skies." I believe this building will stand for God and for humanity.

This institution will tell to all who shall pass this way of a humane and philanthropic government of the state of Oregon, with wise and judicious forethought making such rich provision for the comfort and safety of those poor unfortunates who have lost the priceless treasure of their reason.

Ladies and gentlemen, for these and many other reasons, this is a most auspicious occasion, and will not be soon forgotten by any of us. I am especially glad to see all of these children and young people present. It will be remembered by and mean much to them after some of us older ones have gone.

The laying of the corner stone of this institution today is something which commends itself to the approval of all, and will surely have the approbation of the Almighty himself.

Secretary Olcott's Speech.

Secretary of State Olcott gave one of the briefest of the addresses yesterday and, for the benefit of those absent and those unable to hear, it is reprinted here. Governor West's addresses and resume of Treasurer Kay's remarks having been published yesterday:

It gives me great pleasure to be with you today and to participate in these ceremonies.

The institution to be built on the cornerstone just laid, in time to come will be one of the greatest in the state. Half a million dollars will be expended in constructing the main buildings to be used in sheltering those poor unfortunates whom the state may be called upon to care for. Ultimately $1,000,000 will be expended for building purposes alone. The care of its insane is the state's greatest charity, and while infinite care must be exercised to see that every dollar appropriated for this institution is honestly and judiciously expended, I hope that the legislature and the people may never be unmindful of their duty to provide liberally for this and similar institutions.

I wish to congratulate the people of this community on this auspicious inception of a great undertaking which will benefit not alone Pendleton and Umatilla county but the entire eastern part of the state.

The launching of this gigantic enterprise on a spot that, within the memory of some of those present today, was dotted by the signal fires of the warlike Umatillas, is a striking evidence of the marvelous development of one of the most promising sections of the great west.

It is a rare privilege to be with you today and to take a small part in founding a great hospital, the establishment of which will redound to the everlasting credit of the people of Oregon, and the kindly and beneficence of which will add so much to the peace, happiness and welfare of society.
