MAKES PLEA FOR A CITY BEAUTIFUL

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT GIVES ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Urges Removal of Bill Boards and Cleaning Up of Vacant Lots, Back Yards and Alleys, and Curbing of Streets.

Although only a small audience was out to hear him last evening, Howard Evert Weed, the noted landscape architect pleaded for a city beautiful with as much eloquence as though the assembly room of the city hall had been crowded to capacity. Illustrating his lecture with splendid stereoscopic views, he showed steps, unattended by any great expense of money or labor, whereby the citizens of Pendleton could make their city a place good to look upon. Incidentally, he pointed out some of the improvements planned for the making of Round-Up Park a thing of beauty.

Among the suggestions he made last night were the removal of hideous bill boards, the cleaning up of vacant lots, the back yards and alleys, the curbing of streets and the planting of uniform trees in these curbs and the eradication of all eye sores and unsightly places in the city.

In the course of his remarks upon the beautification of a home, he pointed out that many tree butchers mutilate a tree in order to try to make it grow against its nature. This was an argument against the cutting of the tops out of trees for he declared that any tree or shrub is most beautiful when allowed to fulfill the law of its nature. Only dead and useless branches should be cut away, he declared.

Mr. Weed also appealed to the city to make a public playground for the children, declaring the need for one to be imperative to any city of any size.

His views illustrated his arguments, showing street scenes before and after improvement. Altogether his lecture was extremely entertaining as well as instructive and it is regrettable that more citizens did not attend.

SECRETARY OF STATE WOULD STOP ABUSES

Salem, Ore., April 11.—In his efforts to weed out the undesirable corporations from Oregon, Secretary of State Ben W. Olcott has prepared a list of questions which he will send to the officers of every corporation whose operations are open to question. There is no law compelling the corporations to answer the questions, but Secretary Olcott is proceeding on the theory that reliable corporations will have no objection to giving the information he requests, and if others do not then he will use publicity to put them out of business.

Under the plan, which is but a temporary scheme to be used until adequate laws are enacted, whenever the secretary of state receives a request for information about a certain corporation he will send the officers of the corporation this list of questions, and if the questions are answered the information will be given to the enquirer. Otherwise the name of the corporation and the circumstances will be given out to the newspapers. The questions cover every phase of a corporation's activity and financial condition, and to what extent it is selling stock. There are 40 questions in the list.

GIRL BEATS A MASHER.

Offender Gets Twenty Days, Besides a Pair of Black Eyes.

New York.—When John Foglia was arranged before Magistrate Harris in the Harlem Court, charged with following and annoying a school-girl, his face was a map of chaos. His eyes were closed, his nose and lips swollen and several of his teeth were loose from the beating he received from the complainant, Miss Carrie Thompson, 15 years old.

Miss Thompson told her father several days ago she had frequently been followed, and he and Detective Gery kept her in sight. Foglia, it is said, appeared and called out: "Hello, chicken!"

Miss Thompson called into him with her umbrella and her fists and her father helped her. Gery had difficulty in separating the three and placed Foglia under arrest.

Foglia was sent to the workhouse for twenty days.

SIGHT COMES BACK IN GALE.

Man Regains the Use of Sight Eye While Out in Storm.

Reading, Pa.—Perhaps the happiest man in Berks county is Jonas A. Miller, a stonemason of Schubert, this county, who, after having been unable to see out of his right eye for thirty years, had the use of it restored to him in a remarkable manner.

In 1882 he lost the use of one eye through some unknown cause.

Several days ago he walked from his home to Strausstown, a distance of two miles, during a fierce storm, and he was compelled to face the strong gale on his way home. The wind blew considerable dust into his eyes.

His right eye filled with water and he rubbed it, and presently he was able to see a dim light. He kept on rubbing the eye, and upon his arrival home his sight had been fully restored.

LONELY BOY'S SONGS TOUCHES THE HEART

New York.—There were 1,000 relatives and friends calling on patients in Bellevue hospital. Little Ralph Messera, lying on his cot in a ward on the third floor of the main building with an arm and leg in plaster casts, didn't have a called. His mother is dead. He watched the faces of other sufferers brighten at the touch of loving hands, stood the sight awhile and then called the nurse.

"Please, can I be propped up in a chair out on the balcony?" he pleaded. His request was granted. Down in the courtyard, visitors were coming and going. Ralph watched them for a time. Then he cleared his throat and raised his face until it was bathed in sunshine, and—

The procession of visitors halted. Windows were raised and those who appeared paused with mouths agape the better to listen. A song was filling the precincts of the hospital, filling them with a plaintive melody carried straight to the hearts of eager listeners on the wings of a boy's voice. The notes were limpid and pure.

"When I'm Alone, I'm Lonesome," was the refrain. Other songs followed, and their sweetness held the crowd enthralled.

"Say kid, you ain't blue?" tenderly asked a man who was near Ralph on the balcony.

"Not any more," said Ralph, who was run down by a truck a week ago. "But somebody has come to see everybody here except me today."

"Say, kid, you've got more friends right here this minute than all the rest of us bunched together," said the man.

A letter received this morning by C. K. The $15 Watch for Business and Professional Men

Doctors, lawyers, preachers, merchants, bankers, editors, politicians, candidates for offices and traveling men—take notice.

A dollar alarm is good enough for measuring your sleeping hours but if you want other folks to respect the value of your time you must give them some evidence that it is valuable. Don't measure your real life, your working hours, with a miniature alarm clock, fitted in a tin case, with a paper dial.

Own a real watch. You'll find a many sided satisfaction in it. I don't know where you can buy more watch value for $15.00 than I offer.

Your future watch is an Elgin, guaranteed by the makers and me.
