

WHY TAKE A CHANCE?

With "take-a-chance" merchandise when this store offers you such a varied and well selected stock of the best the whole American market affords, and we price these goods so that they cost you no more, and in many cases not as much as you are usually asked for inferior makes. Our goods are made by manufacturers who have a world wide reputation at stake, and every article we sell is guaranteed, not only by us but by the manufacturer as well.

This store shows you the latest ideas, when they are new, not when they are a season old. When you buy here you can rest assured that whatever you buy IS RIGHT.

In Order to Make it Doubly Profitable for You to Make This Store Your Store

We give T. P. W. trading stamps. They mean a saving to you of exactly 5 per cent of your clothing, dry goods and grocery expense.

Is that worth anything to you? Stop and figure out how much these items cost you in a year's time, you'll be surprised. Figure 5 per cent of the amount and you'll be surprised again to see how many choice premiums it will buy for you. Things that you actually need and have wanted, probably, for years, but haven't felt like paying out the hard cash for.

You don't need to save a full book of T. P. W. trading stamps. We have premiums for as little as thirty stamps, which represents only $3.00 worth of business.

Bad Weather Interferes With Baseball at La Grande

La Grande, Ore., April 25.—Weather that has smacked of mid-winter conditions is proving detrimental to the best development of material now here to work out for a uniform in the La Grande baseball club. Spasmodic workouts have been held between showers but no consistent work is accomplished, and players and heads alike are anxious for a wee bit of respectable practice weather. As a consequence "the weeding out" hour has not arrived yet as it seems to have done in Pendleton.

AT THE PICTURE SHOWS

Orpheum.

An extra good program for Friday change. Four full reels of the best pictures.

1. "Oh! Those Eyes." Biograph. Gladys simply could not make her eyes behave. When her father finds his clerks fascinated he decides to help them teach her a lesson. With what results the picture shows.

2. "Those Hickerville Boys." Biograph. Hank and Zeb do a vaudeville act at the town hall for the benefit of the new school house, and the town tells them they are wasting their time in Hicksville, they should be on the stage. So they start out to become real actors.

3. "The Sacrifice." Lubin. Howard Ecknap falls in love with Enid La Rose a dancer. His mother urges Henry Carlton her own admirer to break up the match. An automobile accident brings the dancer and Carlton much together and Eold falls desperately in love.

4. "Me and Bill." Sellig. An idol of American life. It begun in about the 30's with four school children—two girls and two boys.

5. "A Man Worth While." Melles. Ann Worth decides to go west in search of Man Worth While and finds employment as governess to a ranchman's daughter. Here she meets her ideal.

The Pastime.

The home of good pictures. Special for Friday and Saturday.

"Charlie's Reform." Edison. Produced in co-operation with the division of recreation of the Russell Sage Foundation. A clerk is seen calling upon his best girl surrounded by her family, including very unwelcome small brothers and small sisters. Her parents refuse to allow her to go out with him evenings and they consequently separate. He goes to one of the cheaper dance halls. The result of this incident the love story is broken and the young man goes from bad to worse.

"The Unknown Violinist." Vitagraph. A picture with a situation that is very well acted by Mr. Chas. Kent and Mr. Leo Delaney.

"Cured." Essany. You will be cured of all pet grouches, and that gloom jinx of yours will disappear when you see this comedy concert, rich in humor and real fun.

"Brave Heart's Hidden Love." American Pathe. A touching story of a little girl whose parents were killed by Indians grows up as the adopted daughter of a white settler and the one Indian who lives in the same hut with him. They both love the girl dearly. Finally an artist comes along with whom she falls in love and he takes her to his eastern home.

Cosy.

Friday and Saturday, we present Madame Sarah Bernhardt, the world's most famed actress in her most profound success.

"Camille." Both in novel and play form the success of "Camille," by Alexander Dumas, has been world-wide and eternal. The popularity of the story increases with the year. "Camille" is no fantastic romance; it is a cross section of life; a human document; the true story of a love, loving who lived, who adored and who died. Marguerite Gauthier was not an imaginary woman. In life she was Marie Duplessis and in 1845 she was the reigning beauty of Paris and the toast of all the clubs. She was remarkable for her exquisite luxury, her dazzling beauty and a certain nobility of character combined with natural distinction. She led the agitated life of the courtesan without joying in its success. Falling into consumption, she despaired and let herself drift with the whirlwind of fast life in Paris. At a gay ball, her friend and neighbor, Prudence, introduced her to Armand Duval. She met him with indifference, but he fell madly in love and when she fainted in the dance Armand aided her and revealed signs of sorrow and love. Marguerite, not being used to such tender affection, was drawn to Armand. They fell deeply in love and lost no opportunity to be together. One day Marguerite asked Armand to leave as she was tired and needs rest. All unsuspecting he goes away, but as he passes out he sees the Count of Gray enter. Mad with jealous rage he gives Prudence a letter for Marguerite, expressing his regret at not being a millionaire and announcing his intention of leaving Paris without seeing her again. Marguerite receives this letter at the moment she gets a check from the count to pay her heavy debts and leave her free. She bursts into tears and is prostrated. Armand, hearing of her profound sorrow, goes to her and begging her pardon for the letter, assures her of his love. They arrange to leave Paris together and live in the country in happiness. Unfortunately, Armand's father receives a letter from the father of his son's fiance stating that a marriage cannot take place until Armand has cast off Marguerite. To protect the happiness of the children, M. Duval goes to Marguerite and begs her to give up Armand. A powerful scene follows and Marguerite consents when she is convinced that an innocent girl's heart will be broken if Armand remains with her. In a storm of tears she writes a letter to Armand informing him all is over between them and she is about to leave Paris with Count of Varille. Armand is overcome at the news and has to be taken home. Months later Armand sees Marguerite enter a ball room with the count. The gambler wins heavily. Excited and reckless he goes to Marguerite and reproaches her and taking the banknotes he has just won throws them in her face, expressing his contempt for the woman he thinks only mercenary. A duel follows between Armand and the count. Marguerite returns home and takes to her bed to die. Armand's father tells his son the true story of the affair. Armand rushes to her and finds her dying. Then follows the wonderful death-bed scene in which Bernhardt reveals herself as the divinity of tragedy. Great scenes crowd close upon each other.
