AT THE OREGON THEATRE

"The Squaw Man." In "The Squaw Man," which comes to the Oregon theatre Tuesday, April 30, one finds a play of the west replete with types and characters of that region, and with a spice of novelty that is far too infrequent upon the stage. Strangely enough, for that is true, a drama that touches on the teeming strenuousness of the Wyoming territory, there is little of the swash-buckling element in the play. While there is a bad man and a sheriff, and several cowpunchers, one misses the rip-roaring, terrifying clash of personalities that is expected in a western play. In fact, there is no hint of coarse ruffianism so often to be found in plays of this description, and while the emotions are stirred by many moving climaxes, these are safely sidetracked in an artistic manner by the dramatist until they satisfy the sense without shocking the nerves. Edwin Milton Royle, who wrote the play, has admittedly done the best work of his career in "The Squaw Man," which, by the way, was evolved from a short one-act piece Mr.

Royle wrote for the Lambs Gambol in New York quite four years ago. He has built up a drama that is of the heroic mould, and which moves steadily forward with an inexorable purpose until the plot has been filled out in a satisfactory manner down to the last detail. There is no point that is left uncovered, but just a good whole-souled, clean and satisfying picture of men and things that moves the auditor irresistibly and carries him along. It is a play that deals with men as they are, and points to the dormant something that lies at the bottom of every man's soul when there is a woman somewhere in his life. While the first act is laid in England, the last three are placed happily in Wyoming, in the heart of the cattle country as it was some 20 years ago, and the character of the British army officer, who for love of his brother's wife, deliberately saddles himself with a crime of which he is innocent and buries himself in the west, is splendidly drawn and ably handled.

If you cough all night you get no rest, nor does anyone else in the house. Keep within reach a bottle of BALLARD'S HOREHOUND SYRUP. It is then easy to stop the tickling which causes the cough, when ever it appears. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by A. C. Koeppe & Bros.

HARVARD LACKS ETIQUETTE.

Students at Table Throw Bread at Visiting Princeton Debaters. Cambridge, Mass.—Hugh L. Gaddis prominent socially and manager of the Harvard University track team, made the statement the other day that the students of memorial Hall took liberties which would not be countenanced in any other public dining hall. He cites as a striking example the following incident: "The members of a visiting debating team (Princeton)," says Mr. Gaddis, "were taken to the hall for luncheon as guests of the members of the Harvard team. Innocently enough, after luncheon they were cordially received in the aisle by friends. This incurred the displeasure of some at a nearby table, who, not recognizing them as absolute strangers, threw a piece of bread at them. Others did likewise, and the party was literally driven from the hall. "Innocence of the identity of the men," he concludes, "does not excuse such a disgraceful procedure, which deserves the unmitigated condemnation of all fair-minded men."
