BERNHARDT WINS HER GREATEST TRIUMPH

"Divine Sarah," at 69, Captivates Vast Audience at Opening of Her Own Theater.

London.—Sarah Bernhardt earned one of the greatest, most remarkable and best deserved triumphs of her long career. She appeared at her own theater, for the first time, in the title part of Emile Moreau's latest play, "La Reine Elizabeth."

By the miracle of her art, by the prodigies of her will, her dramatic insight, at the age of sixty-nine, this incomparable actress conquered the difficulties of the most trying role, showing herself now as a patriotic heroine, now as a loving woman, later as an avenging spirit, and at the very end as a distracted, dying, but indomitable queen.

After each of the four acts the house cheered her to the echo, recalling her a dozen times and raining flowers at her feet.

The play is woven about the love of Essex and Elizabeth. In the opening act Elizabeth discovers that Essex has betrayed her for Lady Howard, her confidant.

In the last act, when she learns that the ring was sent, but never delivered the queen dies royally, falling face forward from her throne to a couch below.

Emile Moreau has devised an impressive and stirring drama, which needs only the exclusion of some tedious and quite needless scenes to be most effective.

The confrontation of Lady Howard and Elizabeth, a both were dying in the final act was wonderfully effective. The stage pictures were of rare and unusual beauty.

COURT SAYS MOTHER-IN-LAW IS ASSET IF TREATED RIGHT

Chicago, Ill.—"A mother-in-law is a good asset if you treat her right. She often has been unjustly maligned," declared Municipal Judge Goodnow in the court of Domestic Relations, George McLennan, 516 West Fifty-eighth street, who was arraigned on a charge of wife abandonment, had just laid the blame for his marital difficulties on the presence of his wife's mother in the home.

Mrs. McLennan told a different story.

"When my husband spent all his money on drink," she said, "why my mother would come to the rescue. We would be out on the streets now if it were not for mother."

"You don't appreciate what your mother-in-law has done for you," the judge told McLennan.

"That may be," he replied, "but I don't want her in my house."

Judge Goodnow informed him that he could put her out if he supported his family, otherwise he would have nothing to say about the conduct of his family.

"You have a right to determine who is in your home as long as you support your family," said the court.

Mrs. McLennan testified that during the twenty-one years of their married life her husband had bought her only one coat and dress, but that she was willing to take him back if he turned over a new leaf. The court gave him till April 30 to do so.

WOMAN TIES UP A TOWN.

Puts Attachment on Furniture and Vehicles to Satisfy Claim.

Portsmouth, N. H.—For more than an hour the municipality of Portsmouth was without furniture, vehicles or horses, owing to an attachment on behalf of Mrs. Ellen Quinn, who had entered a claim of $3000 for damages for an alleged injury to her property.

All furniture in the city hall and all horses and vehicles in the different departments, including the "hurry-up" wagon and the horse that pulls it, were included in the attachment.

Mayor Badger gave personal bonds and the embargo was raised.

TOWN TO BUY OUT MINES.

Williamsport, Pa.—The people of Ralston, a village on the Northern Central railway, have raised $21,000 with which to buy the coal mines near the town, which have been idle for six years.

The mines will be operated under the direction of a board of managers. They will employ 200 men.

The purchase of the mines is the industrial salvation of the town.
