Newsy Notes of Pendleton

Must Have Horses Inspected.
Before the Round-up band can take its horses over the Canadian line to Calgary, they must be inspected by a veterinary, hence to avoid trouble, the boys will see that each mount is properly approved before it is placed aboard the car here.

John Hatley Recovering.
John Hatley, Jr., has "come back" following his recent strenuous experience while serving as a special night officer. Mr. Hatley has so far recovered from his injuries as to be down town occasionally, though he still carries his right arm in a sling.

Go To Portland by Auto.
Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Burke left this morning by auto for The Dalles from where they will ship their car to Portland. The scouring mill having closed, the Burkes will take up their residence in Portland.

First Visit in 30 Years.
Assessor C. P. Strain yesterday enjoyed a visit with a friend of his school days, J. J. Bixler, who is now a prominent rancher of Cashmere, Washington. Mr. Bixler stopped off here and called upon the assessor who, though he had not seen his visitor for over thirty years, recognized him. Mr. Bixler left this morning for Burns.

Oklahomans Want Land.
E. C. Ural and A. J. Jackson, both residents of Oklahoma, but who have been in eastern Washington temporarily, arrived here this morning. They are enroute for the Burns country to look over that region with a view to locating a colony on Oklahoma. They are looking for farming land and want to locate where they can secure some homestead land if possible.

Stapish Hearing This P. M.
The hearing resulting from the granting of a habeas corpus petition in the case of the State of Ohio vs. Dr. W. J. Stapish was scheduled for this afternoon. However, on account of the lateness of No. 17 Circuit Judge G. W. Phelps did not arrive until after 3 o'clock and hence the hearing could not be commenced until late.

Augustus' Father Here.
J. B. Augustus of Los Angeles, stepped off the train last evening and surprised his son, Ray Augustus, the crack little Pendleton shortstop. The elder Augustus is taking a month's vacation and intends spending a part of his time here. He was just in time last evening to partake of a grouse feed which some of the players had gotten up as a result of the prowess of the Monday afternoon hunters.

Is First Through Harvest.
A. W. Nye is considerably elated over the fact that he is probably the first man in this part of the county who has finished harvest operations. As receiver of the J. W. Young land during the pendency of litigation, he superintended the harvest of the crop of blue stem wheat on it. When the rains of last week started, he had just finished cutting and switched his horses and men from the combine to wagons. Yesterday he finished hauling the 5500 bushels to the warehouses.

Rice and Charles H. Carter.

Robert McGee Is Dead.
Jessie McGee has received the news of the death of his father, Robert McGee of South Bend, Wash., on the morning of August 19. He had been in the hospital at that place for the past three months. News of the death came from Roy Whitcomb, brother-in-law of the local man. The deceased was 76 years of age and was a pioneer of California and Oregon. He came west across the plains in the 50's and was an early day resident of Lane county. He came to Pendleton about 15 years ago. Aside from Jessie McGee other children are Willard McGee of Folsom, California; Mrs. Roy Whitcomb of South Bend, and Mrs. L. D. Logan of Long Beach. The funeral was held at Eugene this morning.

FIGHT, FOG, ACCIDENT ON BOARD OLYMPIC

Onesided Row Between Westerner Accused of Gambling and New Yorker Appose the Passengers After Propeller Is Lost in Mist.

New York.—"Wasn't it dreadful?" buzzed the lady with the floating veil, to the one with the bundle of steamer rugs, as they came down the gang plank of the Olympic. "That dreadful man slapped him right in the eye!"

The Olympic lost a propeller, ran into a fog and had a fight on board. The fight was in the smoking room. There were two blows struck. One man hit another and he hit the floor. But the tale's worth telling.

H. C. Adler, a New York business man, who lives in Paris and who was coming home on a visit, sat in the smoking room Tuesday afternoon. "I believe there are professional card sharps on board," he said. "That so?" queried a fellow smoker. "Yes sir!" he replied. "And that big fellow with the broad brimmed hat and the breezy, open work manner is one of them."

Lands Right to the Eye.
Somebody "carried the message to Garcia." The big fellow came on the run, his coat tails standing out with wrath. He walked up to Mr. Adler.

"I understand you've been telling folks that I'm a professional gambler!" he roared, as he shot a straight right into Mr. Adler's eye.

While Mr. Adler was taking the count the man with the broad brimmed hat pulled a bundle of yellow-backs from his pocket. He flung them down. Then he jumped on his hat.

"I'm from the west," he said, "and I can lick my weight in wildcats. I'll bet $1,000, and there it is, that there isn't another man here who dare to call me a gambler. I'm a western lumberman and this is my first trip on the ocean. I won't be called a gambler."

"Naughty," Says Captain.
Captain Haddock heard the rum-pus. He sent his strong arm squad, consisting of the purser and the chief steward to quell it. They took the westerner and led him gently to the captain's cabin.

"Naughty! Naughty!" said the captain. "You must not fight on the high seas. Remember what happened to Captain Kidd."

The westerner was quiet during the remainder of the voyage, while Mr. Adler nursed a damaged eye back to nature's color. Mr. Adler said that he had no proof that the westerner was a gambler, but he felt sure about it just the same.

He expects to join them as soon as possible, unless congress keeps until the time for the trip has expired.

BIRD PUTS DOG TO FLIGHT.

Animal Was a Thoroughbred Bull and Owner Was Astonished.

New Orleans.—An ordinary mockingbird, with the exception of an abnormal curiosity and belligerent disposition, attacked and put to flight a thoroughbred bulldog at Coliseum and Napoleon avenues, much to the amusement of street-car passengers and spectators.

The bull pup was strolling along placidly wagging his nubbin of a tail when the bird swooped down from a shade tree, alighted on the dog's back and began its attack on the abbreviated tail.

The astonished dog suddenly sat down, whereupon the bird changed its tactics by darting at the animal in swift rushes, pecking at eyes, muzzle and ears and emitting shriek notes of anger. The dog stood it for a few seconds, suddenly bolted, yelping every ten feet.

"Well, I'll be——!" exclaimed the dog's owner, starting off on the dog's trail.
