MRS. HUNTER, MISSING BRIDE, RETURNS HOME

Portland, Ore., Dec. 20.—A taxicab drove swiftly up to a little flat on the street floor at 314 Jackson street and before it had come to a full stop a very pretty weeping young woman had jumped out and was rushing up the front steps into her mother's arms. And so the search ended for Mrs. Joseph Hunter, who was Miss Bessie Cotter of Portland, and who disappeared in San Francisco on the fifth day of her honeymoon. The young woman in the taxi was the lost bride. "Oh, I got so lonesome to be home—and I was ill, and wanted mother," she was weeping on her mother's shoulder an instant later.

"I'm so sorry for poor Joe," she sobbed on. "I do love him, dearly, and I want him now. But I just had to be home, for I felt so ill and miserable, and only mother could understand."

"I just got it into my head that I must kill myself or get home, and somehow I couldn't talk to him about it, so I wrote that note.

"I left it for him and slipped away when he thought I was going to see the doctor. I did want to die at first I didn't know how I would kill myself, but I thought of drowning and taking poison—and then I thought of mother and all the trouble she had been through since father died, and I just came home."

"It's all right," said her mother, Mrs. E. V. Cotter, who petted her and comforted her. "It is all right, little girl. We're so glad you are home." So, despite their sympathy for the young bridegroom, and the tears of the weeping bride, whose nerves gave completely away, it was a happy time in that household. When they had failed to hear from her at the home of Mrs. W. G. Tran, a friend at 1196 Ellis street, San Francisco, they had begun to fear she was really dead.

GRANTS PASS WILL FINANCE RAILWAY

VOTE ON BONDING SCHEME IS CARRIED UNANIMOUSLY

City Holds Celebration in Honor of Event—Work of Construction Will Begin at Once—Pacific-Interior Railway to Connect With Tidewater at Crescent City.

Grants Pass, Ore., Dec. 20.—The special election held Wednesday on the question of bonding the city for $20,000 for the financing of the first unit of the Pacific-Interior railway, the proposed new route to tidewater at Crescent City, carried by practically unanimous vote, only 62 of the 1200 ballots cast being against the bonding. Following the announcement of the count the town went wild with enthusiasm, bon fires, ringing bells, exploding bombs and cheering crowds keeping the city awake till past midnight. The indication that Grants Pass was a united town was the occasion of the celebration about as much as the fact that the vote assured the building of the needed road to the sea.

The citizens by popular subscription have already provided funds and purchased 26 acres of terminal grounds in the heart of the city as well as the right of way to the Illinois valley, 15 miles out.

The voting of the bonds by Grants Pass makes available nearly $1,000,000 for immediate use in the building of the road, and work will be commenced from each end of the line. Crescent City, which through its citizens and the redwood lumber interests has raised nearly $500,000, joined in the celebration, word from there showing that their people were greatly aroused there over the remarkable vote.

Pay compliments if you will, but pay your bills first.
