PIONEER SHEEPMAN RECALLS OTHER DAYS

(Fred Lockley in Portland Journal.)
Nat Webb, pioneer sheepman of the Inland Empire, is registered at the Imperial for a few days. In answer to my question as to what brought him to Portland, he said: "Portland is the magnet which draws us from all over the northwest. I have to come down to Portland once or twice a year to keep track of your city. If I didn't it would sure get away from me and I would get lost when I came down. All of the landmarks are being pulled up by the roots and skyscrapers are being put up in their place."

"Next year will be 60 years since I have been jogging up and down the coast, stopping off at Portland occasionally for a visit. I came from Connecticut to California in 1854. I don't run across many Connecticut people out here, even though Portland is called the New England city of the Pacific coast. Take these down easterners—they are as tough as wet buckskin. Take me, for instance. I am 79 years old, but I rip around like a young fellow and take in everything that's going. You can't keep me away from the theaters and moving picture shows."

"I worked in the mines of California for a few years and then came up to Roseburg, where I stayed for some time. In 1868 I bought a band of 800 sheep in Roseburg, paying $1.50 a head for them. I drove them overland to Hoppon. I guess that pretty near makes me the pioneer sheepman of the Inland Empire. For that takes you back 45 years, and I am still running sheep. I used to run big bands of sheep all over eastern Oregon and Idaho, for in those days every acre was covered with bunch grass and a man's range was as far as he could see. A few years after I had gone up there my herds had increased and I had bought new bands until I was running about 10,000 sheep. In those days the mutton was a minor consideration. The big item was the wool. Nowadays it has been reversed. Ewes are now selling for $5 a head and mutton sheep are very high. While the sheepmen are not exactly coveting a reduction in the wool tariff, nevertheless they can stand it at the high prices of mutton much better than under the old conditions when they depended entirely on the wool, and a reduction in its price meant a serious loss to them."

Paradox of Sheep Business.

"I went to a show the other night and there was a girl singing a song. It's been humming in my mind all day. The only lines I can remember is 'Life is a funny proposition, after all,' and when you come to think of it, it is a funny proposition. Take the sheep business, for instance. Two years ago sheep were high. Everybody imagined they could make their fortune by going into sheep, and the more people wanted to buy them the higher the price got. The consequence was that so many people went into the business, that the next year the price was low and a lot of the amateur sheepmen went broke. They couldn't meet payments on their borrowed capital, so they sold the sheep for what they could get. The consequence was that more sheep were turned off as mutton and fewer sheep were raised, so the price this year is up again. Conditions in the sheep business have changed so that the price never will get down to the old low price. Free grass and unlimited range is a thing of the past and sheep can only be raised now on deeded land. There is only so much land and they are getting more people all the time, so the price of land is rising until you can't afford to keep sheep on deeded land and raise feed unless you can get a pretty fair price for them. I am only keeping a few thousand nowadays on a range near Heppner."

"In 1876 I went up to Walla Walla and bought a few sections of railroad land at $2.50 an acre. No, I haven't sold any of it. You don't catch any of the oldtimers selling land. They buy land all the time. I presume I could get $50 or $60 an acre for this land now, but none of it is for sale. We oldtimers don't have much use for these so-called boosters, who come in and buy land at $75 or $100 an acre and cut it up into five and ten-acre chunks and charge $2000 or $3000 an acre and unload it on newcomers from the east. It is too much like the old mining days when they used to sell salted claims. Of course, the newcomers kick at us, too. They say we oldtimers are gradually buying out our neighbors and that a big wheat crop means that we put all the profit we got out of our crop into buying more land, and that in some sections of eastern Oregon there is less population than there was 10 or 15 years ago, but the more land you have if you are wheat farming, the cheaper you can produce your crop. We who have been in the country for 40 or 50 years don't much believe in these boosting methods and the high value of land. It means that we will have to pay more taxes if land values increase."

"We used to get big yields from the wheat lands around Walla Walla and we thought the time would come when the yield would decrease, but on some places I have been farming for 30 years and I am getting just as big yields as the day that we first sowed it to wheat. The soil is getting better. Cultivation is improving the nature of it. We plow it and then harrow it several times a year to keep the weeds down, and it breaks up the surface and makes a sort of a dust mulch that holds the moisture. Sometimes when I go through the Milton Freewater country, just south of the state line near Walla Walla, and see the hundreds of acres of high-priced land set out to strawberries and fruit of all kinds, I remember the old days when I didn't think that land was hardly good enough to buy for sheep range. I have seen Walla Walla grow from a little military post to an up-to-date city. It is the headquarters for most of the well-to-do retired farmers, and there are a lot of pretty plain looking farmers that you can see on the streets of Walla Walla that could draw their check for $50,000 if they wanted to."

PARDONS FOR HENDRICKS AND HALL RECEIVED

Portland, Ore., Feb. 13.—Pardons signed by President Taft have been received granting executive clemency to H. H. Hendricks, who was convicted August 4, 1906, for subornation of perjury in a land fraud case, and to J. H. Hall, former United States attorney for this district, who was convicted in 1910 of protecting land frauds. Hendricks was sentenced April 30, 1909 to 13 months on McNell's Island, and a fine of $500. The issuance of commitment was withheld pending the application for an executive pardon.

STERILIZATION BILL PASSES IN STATE SENATE

Salem, Ore., Feb. 13.—With just 16 votes, the number needed for passage, the Lowell bill for sterilization of habitual criminals, moral degenerates and perverts went to victory in the senate.

Dr. Owens Adair of Astoria, who originated the bill and has lobbied for it at succeeding sessions of the legislature, was a witness to its final success, and she has been invited by Governor West to be present in his office when it is signed.

Senator Day, who first voted against the bill, changed defeat to victory by changing his vote at the end of the roll call. While reconsideration may be moved on the day after a bill has passed, there is believed to be little prospect of reconsideration in this case, as three senators were absent and one, or more of these are believed to favor the measure.

The debate on the bill was short. Farrell led off in its favor. Kellaher said he had heard no good reasons given for its passage, and Butler expressed the idea that the bill is unconstitutional, because if the punishment is not cruel it is unusual.

Joseph supported the bill, and Wood who has before opposed such legislation, said he believed the present bill does not have the defects of its predecessors. President Malarkey declared against it, because, he said, it doesn't do the things it is supposed to do, and doesn't deal with the insane, through whom the laws of heredity may transmit insanity to their progeny.

ny. The vote on the bill was as follows:

Ayes—Burgess, Day, Dimick, Farrell, Hawley, Hollis, Joseph, Kiddle, Lester, McCulloch, Perkins, Ragsdale, Smith of Coos, Smith of Josephine, Stewart and Wood—16.

Noes—Barrett, Bean, Butler, Carson, Kellaher, Miller, Moser, Neuner, Patton, President Malarkey—11.

Absent—Hoskins, Thompson Von der Hellen—3.

CAMAS DRUGGIST HELD ON BOOTLEGGING CHARGE

Camas, Wash., Feb. 13.—Arthur Thayer, a druggist of this place, prominent in business circles, was arrested on a charge of selling liquor illegally. The action is the result of complaints made to Deputy Sheriff W. W. Laws, who, it is alleged, collected the evidence to support the charge. Thayer was released under bonds to appear before the Superior Court in Vancouver. This is the first arrest made on the charge of selling liquor since the saloons were closed the first of the year, and the county officials announce that the local option law will be strictly enforced. It is expected that other complaints will be filed and arrests made in the next few days.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for more serious diseases that so often follow. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

Woman Is As Old As She Looks

No woman wants to look old. Many in their effort to look youthful resort to the "beauty doctor's" prescriptions. Their mistake is that they visit the wrong department in the drug store. Beauty depends upon health. Worry, sleepless nights, headaches, pains, disorders, irregularities and weaknesses of a distinctly feminine character in a short time bring the dull eyes, the "crow's feet," the haggard look, drooping shoulders, and the faltering step.

To retain the appearance of youth you must retain health. Instead of lotions, powders and paints, ask your druggist for

DR. PIERCE'S Favorite Prescription

This famous medicine strikes at the very root of these enemies of your youthful appearance. It makes you not only look young, but feel young.

Your druggist can supply you in liquid or tablet form or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N.Y., and trial box will be mailed you.
