KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM.

- Knowledge and wisdom = far from being one.
- Have oftentimes no connection.
- Knowledge dwells
- In heads replete with thought of other men;
- Wisdom in minds attentive in their own.
- Knowledge—a rude, unprofitable mass
- The mere materials with which Wisdom builds,
- Till smoothed, and squared, and fitted to place—
- Does but encumber whom it seems to enrich.
- Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much;
- Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

—William Cowper.

Up at the high school this week a domestic science lecturer and demonstrator has been engaged in instructing local housekeepers as well as students in the art of cooking. It is an exemplification of the modern tendency to make our schools more practical and at the same time to bring the instruction close to the people. It is a tendency that is going to continue until the time will come when the schools will be far more intimately associated than at present with our social and industrial life. There is every reason why such should come about. It is foolish to have expensive schools and well paid teaching forces and then lock everything up so that the least possible good will result. We should get the maximum benefit from the schools, not the minimum.

The Schools And the People.

Those who espoused the cause of the progressive party may well rejoice at the apostasy of

Aiding the Progressive Party.

Hanna, Munsey and others of their sort. Their going will not weaken the party of the moose, but will strengthen it considerably. It will be well for the progressives if Perkins also goes back to the g. o. p.

It was the presence of Perkins, Hanna and Munsey, more than anything else, that raised the suspicion the warriors at Amageddon were not battling solely for the Lord. Those men are millionaires and trust magnates. How came the Lord's army to get backing from Mammon?

If those fellows will now quit the progressives and leave the management of the new party to men who have no great corporations to protect and who earnestly and sincerely want to strike hard for the advancement of the whole people the progressive party will live and grow strong. No political party can live by war chests. Its strength consists in the principles espoused and in the extent to which those principles appeal to the hearts and the intelligence of the people.

What the future of the progressive party will be no one can foretell. Much will depend upon how well the democrats keep their pledges and how truly they serve the nation. But it seems clear that the defection of its multimillionaire brigade is favorable to the progressives. The party did not win with that support. Without such backing the party should do better.

It will be unfortunate if a lawsuit between two manufacturing concerns should prevent Pendleton taking up the flushing of the streets. It is the up-to-date method of caring for the streets and it is particularly desirable to have that system in vogue during the summer time. It keeps the streets clean and free from dust and disease germs.

If the manufacturers are going to fight among themselves and so bar the use of their flushing tanks it would seem logical for the city to build a wagon of its own. It is no violation of patent rights for one to make something for his own use and there are shops here that should be able to turn out this work.

It is not in good taste of course to scoff at art but it must be admitted even by those most embued with artistic traits that artists at times manifest such peculiarities as to raise the question whether they are unbalanced or merely think the rest of the people unsound of mind.

Dayton, Ohio, has been trying to honor the memory of Wilbur Wright and to do so engaged a noted sculptor, Gustzon Borglum, to design a statue. He has done so and the finished product shows the famous Wilbur standing naked on tiptoe on a rock and he is adorned with the wings of a turkey buzzard in lieu of arms. It is Mr. Borglum's conception of the Man Bird.

Wilbur Wright did great work for aviation and he is entitled to honor. But he did not attempt to fly as do the angels and it is hard to see why he should be so misrepresented. It is not holding the mirror up to nature.

Another parody of this same sort was perpetrated a few years ago when the great American eagle on our coins was required to cease flying and to enter the mill walk attired in rubber boots. There is not one man in 100 but who would prefer to see the eagle travel in the good old fashioned way. It looked better whether it was artistic or not.

Having noted the Wilbur Wright memorial and failing to appreciate the same the Syracuse Post-Standard makes a good point by declaring Dayton should next celebrate that city's escape from the flood by erecting a statue showing a beautiful woman arising by means of web feet from a marsh.

Those homing pigeons that returned to Oregon after having been shipped to Missouri merely did what people do when they try to live in the middle west after having had a taste of bunchgrass. They always come back.

Woolgrowers should not allow the buyers to cut too deeply on the price of wool because of the tariff revision. The supply is short and the world is large.

The Japanese problem is being handled about right since that canal is not quite finished.

You may need an umbrella to protect your straw hat.

Polite.

A story about Charles M. Schwab has been going the rounds of Wall street.

Mr. Schwab, who is very fond of farce comedy, one day bade his secretary get him two tickets for "Charlie's Aunt."

The secretary summoned a page and said:

"Go round to the theater and get two tickets for 'Charlie's Aunt,' please."

The page hesitated and said: "But hadn't I better say Mr. Schwab's aunt, sir?"—Washington Star.

THUS SPAKE THE WISEMAN.

Snobbery is the pride of those who are not sure of their position.

The success of some men is due to their ability to make well enough a little better.

The word "platonic" means passing fun for almost-lovers and tragedy for wives.

Contentment is largely a matter of ways and means—winning ways and sufficient means.

Many a bachelor has prided himself upon the fact that he was too deep to see through, when he was merely making a spectacle of himself.

There is only one thing of which we can be absolutely certain in regard to family trees, namely, that everybody's family is exactly as bad as everybody else's family.—April Lippincott's.

A Grateful Girl.

She—Oh, Jack, I'm awfully glad you proposed.

He—Then you accept me?

She—Well, no; but you see, your proposal puts me even with Kitty Cobb, who had the most of any girl in our set.—Boston Transcript.

Kricker—What's the matter with Jones?

Bocker—He wants the job, but he is afraid he won't look big enough unless he declines it.—New York Sun.

The Creditor—Indeed! Well—ah! Congratulate me, old chap!

SOME COLLEGE ECONOMISTS.

(From the Philadelphia Inquirer.)

Four or five years ago one of our learned professors of political economy wrote for a review an article providing that it would be useless for the United States Steel Corporation to reduce prices because it would not stimulate buying. The ink was hardly dry on the pages of the review when the Steel Corporation was compelled by the competition of the independent producers to reduce its prices, and at once, according to the organs of the steel trade, a great buying movement started which was felt in every line of business.

Now another learned professor of economics protests against reducing duties because manufacturers will be compelled to cut wages, and the manufacturer who is most liberal to his workpeople will suffer the most. This was a common idea seventy-five years ago, when political economy was called the "dismal science." It was supposed that the most successful manufacturer was the one who paid the lowest wages, employed the youngest children, worked his people the longest hours and scrimped and overworked his hands in every way.

We know better now, those of us who are not professors of political economy in protectionist universities.

GUM HUNTING IN NEW ENGLAND

(From the Hartford Courant.)

New Hampshire logging camps was the "gumming." You, of course, have to go on snow shoes, equipped with a long pole from six to nine feet long with a galvanized square tin arranged on the end to form a cup, the edges being left very sharp to loosen the gum from the tree when it was beyond the reach.

Much falls to the ground, but can be easily picked up from the snow. The gum is found in globules, in rifts and seams of the spruce tree, and is a highly prized as well as highly priced product. The lumbermen have little time to gather it except Sundays, but there are now many "professional gummers."

In Boston this gum brings 20 cents an ounce and the choice white clear specimens bring $2 to $2.50 a pound. Thus a good gummer on good territory can easily make from $500 to $800 in a few months, although it is hard work and very often there are days so cold and stormy that he cannot work at all. So, altogether, the work is not alluring from a professional standpoint, but it is good sport for a while.

JOHN DREW'S DISTINCTION.

Joseph Jefferson and Wilton Lackaye were in the same company one season. It was the custom of Mr. Jefferson to respond to curtain calls and make a speech to the audience. He enjoyed it, and the audience enjoyed it also. Mr. Lackaye, however, always contended that an actor should not step out of his part in this manner.

One night after Mr. Jefferson had made his speech and was going to his dressing room, he met Lackaye.

"Well, Wilton," said Jefferson, "how did I do tonight?"

"Oh," replied Lackaye, "the same old story. You went out before the audience and made the usual blunder."

"Blunder!" exclaimed Jefferson. "What did I do or say that you would call a blunder?"

"Why," said Lackaye, "you said, 'As I look into your faces, I feel that I should like to shake hands with each and every one.'"

"Well, what's wrong with that?" asked Jefferson.

"It's perfectly absurd," retorted Lackaye. "The only face that I ever saw that you could shake hands with is John Drew's."—April Lippincott's.

Forethought.

She—But Jack, dear, fancy coming in such shabby clothes when you are going to ask papa's consent.

He—That's all right; I once had a new suit ruined.—Boston Transcript.

CONDITIONS UNPROFITOUS

Dr. Max C. Starkloff, health commissioner, has two watches, one a very fine Swiss, which, by the pressure of a lever, will strike the time of day. Recently Dr Starkloff met two friends at his boat club. One knew he owned this watch, the other did not. The wise one remarked to the other that he was so gifted he could tell the time at any hour of day or night. He offered a wager of $5 that he could make good.

The second friend examined the room carefully to make sure no clock was in sight, and then accepted the wager. The wise friend nudged Dr. Starkloff to press the button so that he could hear the tinkling of the tiny bell, which would tell him the time of day, while the other kept pressing him for an answer. When the situation became very tense, Dr. Starkloff burst into a laugh.

"There's nothing odd to-day," he said to the wise friend. "I'm wearing the bum watch."
