Putting Up Fruit.

One or two peach pits added to the jar of canned or preserved peaches, adds to the flavor of the fruit when the can is opened.

A leaf of rose geranium in a glass of crabapple jelly is worth while conceit. So, too, is a sprig of mint.

If a few tart apples are used in making grape jelly, there is less probability of the jelly not being firm. It is well to have a large pitcher handy when making jelly. The moment the jelly has cooked sufficiently pour it into the pitcher. Then the liquid may be poured more quickly and satisfactorily into the jelly glasses.

It is well to use a silver knife for yarning any kind of fruit. The action of the acid on a steel knife is undesirable.—Newark News.

For Burnt Steel.

Should you ever have trouble with the bright parts of a kitchen range turning black from the heat, says the New York Press, you will find that if you use a cloth dipped in vinegar, rubbing the blackened parts with it, the brightness will soon be restored.

Potato Sandwich.

In puzzling over a new way of cooking Irish potatoes, I discovered potato sandwich, which makes an attractive and delicious luncheon dish, writes a contributor to Good Housekeeping. Select smooth oval potatoes and boil with their skins on until nearly tender. Then peel and slice the long way in one quarter inch slices. Dust generously with salt and paprika and put a thin slice of cheese between each two slices of potato. Lay the sandwiches on a flat buttered pan, brush with melted butter and put in a hot oven to brown and melt the cheese. Garnish with parsley and serve hot. A slice of crisply-fried breakfast bacon added to the cheese makes a nice variation. New potatoes can be used thus, as they are always more waxy than mealy.

WHERE SEVERE LINES SPELL CHARM.

The simplicity and severe lines of this gown are its chief charm. It is an excellent suggestion for pongee, foulard or other light weight silk; or crepe de chine if a more formal gown is desired. The bodice closes in front over a little inset piece of contrasting silk too narrow to be termed vest—on one side of this silk covered buttons are placed and corresponding buttonholes on the opposite side. The lower portion of the bodice is covered with applied Macramé lace reaching nearly to the bust line at the center front but rounding toward the under arm seam where it disappears. An oblong piece of this lace covers the girdle—which is of black velvet—in back, one loop and end falling from beneath. The side skirt overlaps the front and is held in place by a row of buttons. A broad band of lace crosses the center gore.

Cheap Pudding.

One cup of raw grated carrots, one cup raw grated potatoes, one cup seeded raisins, one cup sugar, one cup of flour, one teaspoonful soda, mixed in flour, one teaspoonful allspice, pinch of salt, butter size of an egg. Mix and steam two hours. Serve hot, with vanilla sauce made of one teaspoonful flour, one teaspoonful butter, one cup sugar, one teaspoonful vanilla, one pint boiling water.—Los Angeles Express.

Flax Used Early in Clothes.

When we are wearing the popular linen crash suit this season or the housewife is using the crash toweling in the kitchen, it is interesting to recall that flax, the basis of linen crash, was the earliest vegetable fiber used in clothesmaking. It dates back to the Pyramids; in fact, the cultivation and preparation of flax are said to have shown very distinct traces of their existence during the stone period, but we can form no idea of the manner in which it was planted, steeped, heckled, cleansed and generally prepared for use, any more than we can of the method of cultivation employed.

Flax has played an important part in civilization, for fish lines and nets, ropes for catching wild animals, cords and ropes used in navigation, and all industries dependent upon the use of strong cords are largely indebted to flax. It has been said that it is almost impossible to think of navigation being carried on without the ropes made of flax.

At an early period in the world's history flax evidently held an important place. Especially in ancient Egypt, linen was extensively worn by all classes and was the only fabric which the priests were permitted to wear. Egyptian flax occupied the foremost place in the commercial world and was sent into all regions in which there was any intercourse of the nations, and it held its position until toward the close of the eighteenth century, when cotton took its place as the chief vegetable fiber of commerce.

There has probably never been a time when more linen crash has been used than at the present, both in domestic lines and in coats and suits. It is easily laundered, it is not dampened too much, and is a practical material for warm weather wear. A suit keeps its shape better if it is laid out flat rather than being placed on a hanger, but its appearance is improved if it is pressed out with the hands before each wearing.

Two tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar to one white of egg will make excellent meringues.

U. S. MARINES CALLED FOR IN PEKING, CHINA

Americans Are in Danger as Martial Law is Proclaimed in South.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—To protect American citizens imperiled by the revolutionary movement in the southern Chinese provinces, Charge Williams, at Peking, has called on Rear Admiral Nicholson for a guard of marines from the Asiatic squadron to Kiating in Kiang Si province, which recently seceded. Martial law was proclaimed in Kiang Si and Kiang Si provinces, according to state department reports.

PRISONERS REFUSE TO QUIT PRISON DURING FIRE

OSINGTON, N. Y., July 24.—Because not a single convict attempted to escape from Sing Sing prison yesterday during a fire, although the gates were open two hours, Warden Clancy declared today he intends to ask Governor Sulzer for clemency for many of the inmates. For more than two hours firemen came and went freely through the open gates and even mingled with the prisoners. The latter refused to make any break for liberty, but added as best they could to subdue the flames.

ELECTION WILL BE HELD IN NOV.

Supreme Court Gives Final Answer to Those Who Made Attack on the Day Bill.

SALEM, Ore., July 24.—After discussing the contention that the measure was unconstitutional because it ordered an election without naming the measures to be voted upon, and the further contention that the electorate would be called upon to approve or reject any laws passed by the 1913 legislature, the supreme court in passing upon the constitutionality of the Day bill, says:

"Summing up then, as to the first two objections, we hold that the act sufficiently states the measures upon which the vote will be taken; that there was then actual material in existence subject to the referendum, and that it was competent for the legislature to provide for a referendum for its own measures only. It is also competent for the legislature to anticipate a condition likely to arise in the future, and consequently to provide legal rules applicable to such contingency. This constantly happens in the ordinary course of legislation. Unless, therefore, it is forbidden by the constitution, the legislative assembly, replying to the contention that the bill was unconstitutional in that the election is made to depend upon a contingency, the court says:

"Neither this law nor its taking effect is made to depend on this instance upon anything except constitutional authority. The election itself mentioned may depend upon a contingency, but the election is not law. The statute authorizing it went into effect like any other enactment. It is prospective in its operation, and as in many other cases, as the situation existed at the date of its enactment, there was no immediate use for it, yet it was a law of the state then as much as now. It is the enactment and not the mere use of a law which gives it sanction."

Discussing the last contention that the legislature did not provide ways and means for holding the election, court calls attention to the general election law, and says in part:

"Under the sanction of those enactments all the referendum elections thus far have been held. It would do violence to the rule of contemporaneous construction if we should at this late day decide that every case where the legislature directs a referendum it should also devise a plan for holding the particular election complete in all its details. It would be quite as consistent to say that whenever the law-making power defines a new crime and prescribes a penalty, it must establish a grand jury, ordain forms of indictment and procedure for designated offenses."

The opinion was written by Justice Burnett, and as it holds that the Day bill is constitutional, it will now devolve upon the secretary of state to call the election to be held on the day provided for in the act—the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Among those going yesterday were Clarence Carson and Jack Johnson. Leroy Sullivan spent yesterday at the county seat.

Miss Kennedy spent yesterday in Umatilla, returning this morning. Otto G. Sapper took an early train for Umatilla this morning, returning on the motor.

Germany Holds Telephone Mark.

BERLIN, Germany.—One day recently the secretary of state for the imperial postoffice, Dr. Kraetke paid a visit with several of the chief postal officials to the station of the Telefunken company at Nauen, a few miles out of Berlin.

The apparatus for direct communication with the German colonies, which has been in good working order for some time, was minutely inspected under the guidance of Count Arco, the eminent electrical engineer. Dr. Kraetke had the gratification of speaking to the station at Norddeich, near Emden, a distance of nearly 400 miles. The secretary's words were distinctly audible and were immediately telegraphed back to the Nauen station by wireless.

This interesting experiment forms a world record for wireless telephone.

Pastime.

The Pastime offers for Friday's change an all star feature program. The popular players who will appear are Earl Williams and Florence Radinoff of the Vitagraph Co., Alice Joyce and Tom Moore of the Kalem Co., Dan Mason and Alice Washburn of the Edison Co., Lionell Barrymore, Walter Miller and Harry Carey of the Biograph Co.

"The Cook of Guilt." Kalem. The scenes in this picture are very attractive. The story is one in which a girl, jealous of the mother's secretary hides the jewel box and throws suspicion on the latter.

"In Diplomatic Circles." Biograph. Refused an interview with the Japanese ambassador, the reporter becomes detective. He was assigned to obtain a copy of the message from the Japanese government and unraveled the mystery of its disappearance in a clever manner.

"Her Sweetest Memory." Vitagraph. A very pretty incident quite likely to happen in every day life and filled with honest pathos. "How Did It Finish." Edison. Dan Mason, as the father of the daughter whom he denied the privilege of reading a novel, and Alice Washburn as the mother do excellent work in this delightful comedy.

Cosy.

Wednesday and Thursday a thrilling and timely three-reel feature, "The Grain Speculator." (3 reels) Gt. Northern Feature Film Co. A well-presented photodrama, in three parts, giving the unsuspecting "lamb" an insight of the workings of the ticker which commands the wheat market at intervals, and brings about "the corner" which enriches the speculator and adds to the burdens of the poor. The real merit of this feature lies in the fact that it is not overdrawn for the sake of sensation and deals with a subject that is familiar on the surface, but never before touched upon in motion pictures. The story from the outset is gripping and there are many thrilling scenes and an abundance of excellent photography. The element of heart interest is interwoven when we are made acquainted with the fact that Sutton with his millions, is anxious to have his daughter marry a prince. The latter is killed in a thrilling elevator accident and his sly secretary takes his place. Then follow many complications in which a famous young surgeon, Dr. McHerron, takes an active part. The latter has extracted a promise from Sutton to refrain from "cornering the market," but the old speculator yields to temptation and causes another advance in prices. The sham prince urges Sutton to increase his fortune by this means and in the final scene the "prince" and the grain speculator are seen on the platform of a huge grain elevator. When Dr. McHerron and Sutton's daughter appear on the scene with proofs of the duplicity of the sham prince, there is an exciting scene and Sutton and his intended son-in-law topple over a ledge and are smothered in the stream of wheat which pours upon them. It is a logical and winning story throughout and bears all the elements of an unusual feature.

"The Octopus." Eclair. Natural history. The Octopus or Devil Fish makes an interesting subject. "Going for Father." Eclair comedy.

Wright-Neill Comedy Co. at the Grand Sunday.

The reputation of this company places it at the head of similar traveling combinations, and comprises the Billy Neill family in their novelty musical acts, embracing cornet, trumpet, baritone, marimbaphone, staff bells, saxophone, violin, xylophone, string bass and glockenspiel, all introduced in eccentric comedy acts; it also includes the famous Wright family of four players, Mr. and Mrs. E. Wright and their two clever children, Sidney and George, ages 8 and 6 years. The combination is one of the best up-to-date attractions in the west, who give a whole show in themselves without pictures. They will come to the Grand for two nights only and will open Sunday evening with the big laugh provoker "Keeping Her Eye on Hubby," a lesson for henpecked husbands, "For a Million," one of the cleverest comedies on the stage, full of wit and humor will be the attraction for Monday night. The usual price of 10 and 15 cents will prevail. Miss Diller, more popular than ever, remains as the leading feature at the Grand until further notice.
