Grape Juice Sherbert.

On some warm days, when nothing but a frozen dessert appeals to the fancy, fruit is strangely lacking. Perhaps the berries have mildewed because of rain or dried up because of heat, or perhaps the robins have eaten the cherries or the railway companies have for some reason been remiss about shipping fruit from the grower to the consumer. For such a day nothing could be more refreshing than grape juice sherbert. Make it of a quart of milk, a pint of sugar, a quart of grape juice and the juice of a lemon. Melt the sugar with a bottle of the grape juice and the lemon juice and then pour this mixture, with the rest of the grape juice, over the milk and freeze.

Hot Weather Don'ts.

Among the hot weather don'ts that usually appear in papers all over the country the one that appeals most to housekeepers is, "Never serve heavy meals in summer." Poor thing—she's ready to give up the "serving" of meals, light or heavy, at this stage of the game, and the difficult part of the warm weather catering is that most of the very nourishing foods are heating to the blood and most of the cooler foods are not nourishing.

The first thing to consider in the making of a menu at all seasons is balance. The housewife should try to arrange the light meals for the hot days and to welcome an occasional cool spell to serve the nutritive foods that are so essential to the preservation of strength.

Red meats should be used as little as possible in hot weather. At a meal where it is served the rest of the menu should be light, such as simple vegetable and an iced desert.

On the other hand, when meat is not on the bill of fare plenty of nourishment in other forms should be provided. An iced jellyed broth is appetizing and nutritive. Fish, cold or hot, a salad and an ice makes a good selection for dinner.

Don't play tennis or take long walks if you are feeling tired and "done up." These feelings are nature's warning that you need a rest, and if you fly in the face of such a warning you are bound to suffer for it later.

Buying a Trunk and Packing It.

When buying a trunk, first decide what is to be packed in it and whether it is to be used for journeys over land or for sailing over the seas, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. If a trunk is used for what it is intended, clothes alone and they are packed with intelligence, they will arrive at their destination uncrumpled.

It is the simplest necessity to put rolls of tissue paper under a skirt which may have to be folded over, to puff the sleeves of a gown with tissue and to stuff a little paper into the waists of dresses. An important precaution in the art of packing is to put the heaviest clothes at the bottom. Tissue paper should also be folded between dark and light clothes if freshness is to be expected. Very perishable evening dresses, especially stung or beaded ones, should be packed in thin bags. The most desirable trunks are made in wardrobe style, with their compartments constructed to hold every article of wearing apparel and keep in perfect condition to the end of the journey.

FREEWATER TO GET NEW PHONE RATES

FREEWATER, Ore., July 25.—New telephone rates are to be effective in Freewater, and as a result a 25-year franchise probably will be granted by the Freewater council to the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company. The franchise was taken through the first reading last Monday evening and will come up for final passage at the next meeting of the council.

Formerly telephone rates in Freewater were the same as those in Milton, plus mileage from Milton, the exchange being in Milton. At the time the franchise was asked the Freewater council requested that the rates in Freewater be made the same as those in Milton. The matter was taken before the public service commission of Oregon and a new schedule approved for Freewater. Under the new schedule the O-W. R. & N. depot will be considered the center of population of Freewater.

The message says: "Dr. Robitzsch of the German observatory at Gross Bay came on board yesterday at Moeller Bay and made important communications about Schroeder Stranz. Help has been received. A detailed report will be sent by wireless from Tromsø." The Grosser Kurfurst is due in Tromsø on Friday.

BOYS ARRESTED; SECURED BOOZE

Quartet of Baker Youths Started for "a Good Time"—Saloon Man Haled to Court.

BAKER, Ore., July 25.—Last Saturday evening four boys ranging in age from 14 to 17 years, came into town from the neighborhood of Wingville, and procuring liquor from some source began to have what they called a "good time."

About midnight Officer Nelson detected that they were under the influence of liquor and placed the quartet under arrest. When questioned as to where they obtained the liquor they first said they had obtained some blackberry and whiskey at the Crabill saloon near the depot. They afterwards corrected this and said it was at the Columbia saloon, opposite the Crabill hotel. They claimed that afterwards they had obtained more liquor—three bottles of beer and a pint of apricot brandy—at the Bar saloon, run by Jack Woods.

Complaints were thereupon filed against C. A. Fowler of the Columbia saloon and Jack Woods of the Bar saloon. Mr. Woods was brought to trial before Police Judge Cunningham and was identified by one of the boys, Harry Holst, as the party who sold him the liquor in the Bar saloon. The other three boys corroborated Holst in that they had chipped in 25 cents each with him and sent him to get the booze while they stood on the corner at the old Miller saloon across the street on Reston street; that he crossed the street but they did not notice just which saloon he went into, but that he returned very soon with the liquor in question and they proceeded to drink part of it and cached the other until later in the night.

Mr. Woods on oath said he did not sell any liquor to that boy or any boy Saturday night or at any other time. Attorney McCulloch prosecuted while Attorney J. J. Heilner represented Mr. Woods.

After argument by the attorneys, Judge Cunningham decided that Woods was guilty and imposed a fine of $125. Attorney Heilner gave notice that he would appeal the case to the circuit court. Mr. Woods gave a bond of $75 on appeal.

The case against Mr. Hasler has not yet been brought before the court.

WATERSPOUT ON SALT CREEK NEAR MEDICAL SPRINGS CAUSES DAMAGE

MEDICAL SPRINGS, July 25.—A water spout on Salt creek near Medical Springs at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon did considerable damage to hay, growing crops, gardens and irrigation ditches.

Salt creek at this time of the year runs dry but after the water spout nearly eight feet of water rolled down the stream taking out two bridges. Upon leaving the canyon the waters spread covering the crops of William Furke and Jim Childers. Wynne Duncan, living in the Silas Turner place, is the heaviest loser, as nearly $2000 damage was done to his irrigation ditches, washing away the banks and filling the channels with rocks and silt. The water rose to the level of the house depositing mud and slime on the floors.

George Stout, who was returning from Baker with two wagon loads of supplies, got one team across the bridge before the waters rushed upon him, but the other wagon had to be left on the other side of the stream.

W. J. Miles, road supervisor of that district was in Baker yesterday in regard to rebuilding the bridges. Mr. Miles spent nearly all of Wednesday night in hanging lanterns on the bridges and warning travelers that the road is impassable. He says that the roads in that district will not be in condition to be used by automobiles or teams for several days although horseback riders may do so. There are many rocks in the road which will make them bad for travel all summer.

He says the water flooded an area of six miles for two hours filling all the four ditches of the lower Powder. He and his brother, J. S. Miles, were great losers as their oats and other crops are gone. Their ditches are gone so that a second crop cannot be raised. They estimate their loss at $1,000 and the damage to roads will be a like amount. Childers' loss will also be great.

Mr. Miles had a narrow escape when he tried to drive on the Salt creek bridge. The water had undermined the approaches and horse and rider sunk into a hole. Miles jumped to safety and by quick work extracted the horse. The work of the water was quick for William Holcomb had ridden over the bridge in safety only 15 minutes before. Burt Vandeventer was on his way to his home near Medical Springs but was warned and kept his team and loaded wagon on the bank.

BIXBY TRIAL GOES OVER TO SEPT. 11

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—Because he suffered from an operation to his nose, necessitated by an injury sustained in an automobile accident, Geo. H. Bixby did not go on trial today. The trial is scheduled for September 11.

The case against Bixby grew out of the white slave investigations, started some months ago by the Los Angeles county grand jury when Kitty Phillips, a moving picture actress, was accused of blackmailing a man whose name was withheld by the authorities. She charges that this mysterious character, who went under the name of "Black Pearl," was Bixby.

The blackmail charges were never pressed. Instead, Kitty Phillips was charged with vagrancy before Police Judge Rose, now mayor of Los Angeles, and "run out of town" on a suspended sentence of six months. She took with her to San Francisco, Marie Forrester, another young girl. Subsequent charges by Miss Phillips started the grand jury probe, and the two girls were brought back to Los Angeles by detectives. Both testified before the grand jury and the indictment of Bixby, Mrs. Josie Rosenberg and Mrs. Elizabeth Espey followed.

The millionaire claims that the charges against him are the result of his refusal to pay blackmail. He has employed Oscar Lawler, noted as special prosecutor in the McNamara dynamiting investigation, to defend him.

Mrs. Rosenberg and Elizabeth Espey, rooming house keepers, are charged with having enticed young girls into dives and their engineered meetings between them and rich men for profit. Irene Brown-Levy told the grand jury that she was given $800 by one man in one of Mrs. Rosenberg's resorts. The money she says was divided into three portions, one to herself, one to Mrs. Rosenberg and one to Mrs. Espey.

Incensed at the delay the trainmen intend to insist on an early agreement of arbitration terms or call a strike. They claim the delay is costing them $38000 daily.

3,000,000 FEET TIMBER TAKEN

Wenaha Forest Reserve Yields Much Wood to Farmers of Washington and Oregon.

Farmers of southeastern Washington and northeastern Oregon took more than three million feet of timber from the Wenaha National forest during the past year for fuel and other purposes, according to the annual statistical report made by Forest Supervisor J. M. Schmitz for the fiscal year ending July 30, 1913.

More timber was taken from the Wenaha forest by farmers than from any other national forest in the United States, according to the supervisor. Practically all timber taken from the reserve was dead and fit only for fuel.

Timber sales are small in the reserve, only $250 being received from that source last year.

During the past year 22 miles of wagon road were constructed on the reserve, making a total of 162 miles more fit for use. Ten miles of government trail were constructed, making a total of 90 miles of improved trail. There also is 29 miles of telephone line in the reserve.

At the present time there are 10 rangers' cabins, five good for year-around use and five for summer use only. There are 17 improved pastures for rangers and four barns.

When the reserve was first created there were no developed springs, the water coming from the earth in soggy marshes. Now there are 17 improved springs, all well cleaned and fenced.

According to the report, the value of the improvements in the reserve is $20,000. The initial cost has almost been doubled in upkeep, the amount expended being much more than the estimated value.

The reserve contains 791,650 acres of land, of which 319,777 acres is in Washington and 471,873 acres in Oregon.

That little of the land is good for agricultural purposes is shown by the fact that 159 applications for homesteads have been listed, and of this number but 30 listed. A total of approximately 3000 acres has been listed as agricultural land under the applications granted.

This season there were 239 applications for grazing of horses and cattle, and at the present time there are 9250 head of cattle on the reserve under these permits. Fifty-two permits were granted for sheep, and 97,000 full grown sheep are being grazed. The increase in lambs will be approximately 70 per cent of this number.

The report will be turned over to the district forester in Portland.
