Woman and Her Varied Interests

Violet Perfume and How It Is Made.
Violet perfume still holds its own among many newcomers with the dainty woman, and as its preparation is so simple and the apparatus neither complex nor expensive, women of the present day might find violet perfume making at home interesting if they but knew how to do it.

The volatile or essential oils of the violets can be secured in several ways. The simplest method, however, is to place the flowers—with as little stalk as possible—in a wide mouthed bottle or jar three-quarters full of the best olive oil, then stretch a bladder over the top and tie it securely.

After the flowers have been in the oil for twenty-four hours take them out, place them in a coarse linen cloth and squeeze the oil from them, pouring the oil obtained back in the bottle. Repeat this process with fresh flowers until the perfume is of the desired strength.

After the perfumed oil has been secured it must be dissolved with spirits. The alcohol used in making perfumes must be selected with care, and the safest way is to buy the regular "cologne spirits." As a rule, there should be used about half as much alcohol as there is oil. It is an easy matter to tell when enough alcohol has been used, as the mixture will have a white or clouded appearance as long as the oil is undissolved, but will be perfectly clear when the oil is entirely digested.

Never throw away the cloths used in the processes, but place them in a jar of alcohol, leaving them there until the oil that is in them has been digested. The bottles containing the volatile oils must be blagened or wrapped in black paper and kept in a dark place until ready for putting in the alcohol if it is not convenient to use them at once. All essences must be kept in tightly stoppered bottles.

Worth Knowing.
A pinch of baking powder added to the mashed potatoes when they are being beaten to a fluff makes them lighter.

A particular laundress always has a piece of fine sandpaper tacked securely to one end of the ironing table. She says this is the best thing she knows for keeping the irons smooth and clean.

The fat from the boiled ham or bacon drippings will be found an excellent substitute for butter in seasoning vegetables or in making a roux for vegetable soup.

When the nickel chafing dish becomes dull, wipe it off with a soft cloth moistened with ammonia, and then polish with another soft rag.

Fat is easily clarified if a few pieces of raw potato are added to it and then it is heated slowly in the oven or on top of the stove. When it ceases to bubble, strain through cheese cloth and let it stand till firm. Keep in a cool place.—Hartford Times.

For the Cook.
A tasty sauce to serve with boiled herrings is made with a butter sauce as a basis; to it add mixed table mustard and cayenne to taste.

A bit of left-over fish, especially salmon or halibut, will make a delicious forcemeat for stuffing peppers or tomatoes.

Lemons sliced and then each slice cut into quarters make a pretty garnish for a salad, especially in hot weather.—Newark News.

tepid, carefully wash the ribbons in it, says the Detroit Free Press. A certain amount of suds will be made which washes the ribbons free from dirt. They must be carefully rinsed in several waters, dried and ironed between two pieces of muslin while slightly damp. Satin ribbon may be ironed on the satin side and made fresher than when ironed between muslin.

PLACE CARDS IN TELEGRAM FORM

Some interesting place cards are little telegrams. The envelope is white, printed in blue, and the words on the envelope speak of good cheer and friendliness. The telegram inside the envelope has more to say regarding friendliness and hospitality. The name of the guest is to be written on the outside of the envelope. Two dozen of these telegrams, in a box, are sold for 75 cents, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Little letters are also sold for place cards. The envelopes have a slip of transparent paper through the center, like the envelopes used by some business firms, and the name, written on a card with the envelope, shows through the transparent paper. A riddle printed on the card also shows through the paper, and the answer to the riddle is printed on top of the card, to be read when it is taken from the envelope. In the upper left hand top of the envelope are the words, "Return often to the house," and the stamp is formed of the words, "Eat, drink and be merry," printed in red.

SUBSTITUTE FOR A REFRIGERATOR

Take a box of the desired size and remove the bottom, replacing it with strips of wood about an inch wide and two inches apart. Now stand the box on end and nail cleats on the inside to support the shelves, which should be removable for convenience in cleaning. Next take a piece of burlap which should be about 29 inches longer than the height of the box and wide enough to reach around the box with a few inches overlap. Beginning at the edge of the box nearest the front, tack the burlap on smoothly, bringing it even with the bottom of the box and allowing the surplus length to project at the top. The burlap should form the door of the box by slipping the selvage edge of the goods over a row of small nails driven up and down along the side of the box. Place a two-gallon pail filled with water on top of the box and allow surplus length of burlap to fall over into the pail. The burlap will become saturated and the evaporation will keep the interior cool.—Woman's Home Companion.

COXEY ARMY OFFICER BUTTS INTO LIMELIGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Carl Browne, a former Californian and second in command of General Coxe's army in 1894, appeared at the capitol to urge amendments to the administration's proposed currency bill. He seeks support of the bill introduced by Senator Miles Poindexter of Washington, organizing an "industrial army" of unemployed to construct all reclamations works and river improvements. Brown lived in California 19 years.

The Orpheum.
For Tuesday's change a touching two-reel Lubin special, "Home, Sweet Home," featuring Harry Meyers and Ethel Clayton.

"Home, Sweet Home," Lubin, two-reels. A successful man and wife, thinking to make their parents happy, sell the old home and furniture, and take them to the city to live in their luxurious home with them. The old folks longed for their old home and make frequent trips to the old second hand store. John and Nell discover their unhappiness and buy the old home back and all the furniture, and pa and ma went back to "Home, Sweet Home."

"The Taming of Betty," Vita, Featuring Clara K. Young and Maurice Costello. Betty's mother and Sir James Disbrow have arranged for a marriage between Betty and Charles who have never met. Betty storms and goes to stay with a missionary friend when she hears Sir James and his son are coming. They arrive and Ned her brother, accidentally brings about a meeting between them although they do not discover each others identity. Next day Betty's mother sends for her to come home, saying she is ill. Betty goes and her surprise is great when she meets her rescuer of the day before. Her prejudice is removed and Mrs. Forester and Sir James are entirely satisfied.

"The Friendless Indian," Pathe. Even when he rescued the child of a white man his only reward was a nod of thanks, for of course he is a red-skin and as such is doomed to walk the world alone.

"Barcelona, Spain," Pathe.

Pastime.
We will present Tuesday, "The Ne'er to Return Road," a drama of intense heart interest written by Mrs. Otis Skinner in two reels. A powerful play again emphasizes "The Wages of Sin Is Death" and the aftermath of tragedy is told. This new treatment of the world-old theme, and a heart-hold in the mother's love, adds intensity to interest, and the element of suspense is dominant to make it tense and thrilling.

"The Ne'er to Return Road," Sellig in two parts. It is difficult to conceive a deeper sense of injury than the case of the mother facing the murderer of her son after many years, seeing him lie prone in her power, begging for mercy, when she has a loaded rifle in her hand, and all of the hatred of pent-up years to back the bullet for revenge. This is the crux and almost the climax of a powerful new pictorial and emotional play from the pen of Mrs. Otis Skinner. The victim of a modern Cain had a mother who had grieved long and deep and in her wild moments dreamed of vengeance but when it came to the test, pity overwhelmed her, inspired her for a better part, so that she really provided the slayer of her son a means to secure his freedom. "A mother is a mother still, the holiest thing alive."

"A Chinese Puzzle," Biograph. A hilarious comedy, the sweetheart of the girl (Grace Lewis) gets a job with the family in the guise of a Chinese cook.

"The Dream Fairy," Edison.

"The Sweet Box," Biograph. A rough and tumble farce with a laugh in every foot of film.

Program for Monday and Tuesday: "Restitution," (2 reels) Union features. Greed of gold caused Duchane to kill his friend Marvel and appropriate his fortune. Twenty years later Marvel's son Robert, grown to manhood, met an old friend of his father, who, on learning that Marvel had died a poor man became suspicious of Duchane. That night when Duchane went to the hiding place to count his ill-gotten gold, the friend, disguised to look like Marvel appeared to him. Thinking it was Marvel's ghost Duchane fled to his home, where in a frenzy of guilty fear he dynamited his house, destroying himself and totally wrecking the house.

The acting is powerful and the action lively throughout.

"The Dog," Solax. Snap, an unusually clever dog is featured in this comedy. Snap looks at a watch and finding it is late, drives the team home herself, leaving her master behind. In the night Snap's mistress hearing someone in the house sends Snap to arrest the prowler. That it turns out to be Snap's master trying to sneak in makes no difference to the dog who arrests him as ordered. An amusing picture.

"The Silent House," Ramo. Story of a Kentucky feud.

WOMAN CREATED WORLD SHE WAS A BRUNETTE SAYS THE DISCOVERER

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—A newly discovered tablet now at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, brought to this city from Babylonia, gives what is now believed to be the first story of the creation of the world, as well as one of the most wonderful accounts of civilization as it existed in 2500 B. C.

According to this story the world was created by a woman goddess. She was a brunette, because the account says that her hair was black. It is stated that when the world became so wicked that it had to be destroyed, the male gods, angry at the goddesses, opened the flood gates of heaven and drowned all but one man and his family.

There are many parallels between this story and that of the Book of Genesis. Dr. Arno Poebel of Johns Hopkins University, who has deciphered this tablet, has declared that, in his estimation it is the most remarkable story of the Creation which the world ever has known.

The tablet tells of the peculiarities of the women of those days. It says that they had equal rights with men, thus providing the suffragists with an additional weapon for argument, although history in 2500 B. C., says nothing of militant methods. It contains beautiful epic poems, such as characterize the Psalms, and it is now thought that the Hebrew language, which came into use centuries after this Sumerian tablet was written, copied its style. In this way the archaeologists account for the writings of the Scripture in its present form.

The tablet relates all the essentials of the story in Genesis. It tells of the creation of mankind first, just the reverse of the story in the Bible.

Flood Lasted Seven Days.

It tells of a flood that lasted only seven days, instead of forty, or a year, as some historians have insisted took place. It tells of the rewards of Noah, after he had been saved; of how the ark was constructed and why Noah was selected for salvation.

It declares that one prehistoric king ruled 64,000 years, which makes Methuselah look like an infant. It declares that the number of years which elapsed from the Creation to the flood was 460,000.

Parts of the tablet are missing and the university authorities have sent again to Constantinople, in the hope that the fragments may be located in the tombs at Nippur or at the college at the Turkish capital, where many relics from the excavation have been taken.

The late J. P. Morgan is said to have paid $27,000 for a small portion of one of these fragments, which he bought in Constantinople.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS SALEM TRIPLE MURDER

SALEM, Or., Aug. 11.—The mystery of the triple murder in Chinatown when a Japanese woman, man and baby 19 month old were put to death with a knife, remains unsolved today.

The three victims were Mrs. K. Koda, Joe Kiyokawa and Mrs. Koda's baby. Kiyokawa's head was nearly severed from his body and the woman's throat was frightfully slashed, while the baby was pierced through the abdomen. It is believed the baby was knifed while in its mother's arms by a blow intended for the woman.

Three men were arrested and are being held, one being Koda, the husband of the murdered woman. The others are Natsuma, who was a roomer at the Koda restaurant, and Nakamura.

The crime occurred at the restaurant on Ferry street. The bodies either fell or were thrown at the foot of the back stairs. In the melee a revolver was emptied, one of the shots piercing Kiyokawa's neck.

The baby did not die until after the police arrived. Nawamura was seen running with the baby in his arms. It was found he had picked it up and run to a Chinese doctor, and then back again to the kitchen of the restaurant, where he laid it on the floor.

Bruno Boedighelmer was the first man to reach the scene, which was almost immediately after the shots were fired, but by the time he got there a Japanese had covered the bodies with a sheet and the inhabitants of the district were scurrying in every direction, getting away. Two blood stained knives and a revolver were found near the bodies.

The murdered man, who was a cook at a local restaurant, had long been an intimate friend of the Kodas. The police are working on the theory that the husband became suspicious of his wife and was prompted to commit the crime. Koda endeavors to prove an alibi, as about the time of the crime he had made a visit to a sick friend at the Salem hospital. Koda also denies ever having any suspicion of his wife and praises the good qualities of Kiyokawa.

K. Ostubo of Portland, secretary of the Japanese association of Oregon, came here this morning to assist in unraveling the mystery, he said. He said he was sent by the Japanese consulate in Portland.

It is easier to make friends than it is to hold them.

AMERICANS AHEAD OF THE ENGLISH IN MEAT EATING

In Fact Yankees Are Champions of World in This Particular Line of Endeavor.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Americans are the biggest meat eaters in the world. They beat Johnny Bull, with all his legends about the beef of old England. Moreover they eat more beef per capita than the British do.

Figures for meat-eating in 1909, just made public by the Bureau of Animal Industry, of the Department of Agriculture, show that the per capita consumption of meat for that year in the United States, was 162.2 pounds, divided as follows, (fractions omitted): beef, 80 pounds; veal, 7; pork, 67; mutton and lamb, 8; goat meat .13.

Over in England, where they boast about good old roast beef, the per capita for that period is only 56 pounds. Moreover the proportion of beef in the total eaten by the American is exactly the same for the Britisher—47 per cent. Inhabitants of the "tight little isle" make up their total by eating 26 pounds of mutton a year, as against the American's 6 pounds.

The Spanish are the smallest meat eaters, their per capita consumption being only 49 pounds. Germany's is 113 pounds. In both Germany and France pork is the favorite meat.

"In view of the growing scarcity and high prices of cattle and swine and their products in our markets in recent times, it is well to call attention to the comparatively insignificant part played by the bovine species in our meat dietry," the Bureau declares. "It may be seen that we consume only 6 pounds of mutton and lamb per head a year, which is barely 4 per cent of the total meat supply. When we compare this small consumption of mutton with that of England, a very striking contrast is presented.

"Our small consumption no doubt is mainly attributable to the exceedingly cheap and abundant supplies of beef and pork which have prevailed in former years, thus rendering it unnecessary to look elsewhere for meat. But the day of cheap meat is past and the present market prices of food animals point to the fact that it is becoming more and more imperative that every available source of our meat supply should be carefully developed. Hence the necessity for more sheep farming.

"It is undeniable that the sheep species, both in the lamb stage and when older furnishes meat of most excellent quality when the animals are suited for this purpose. Therefore the present seems to be an opportune time for stockmen to pay more attention to the raising of sheep for meat production.

"Finally, it would be in the interest of economy for the people generally to cultivate a greater taste for mutton and lamb, especially the smaller families who require joints of a size that cannot usually be supplied from the larger beef animals. A more insistent demand on the part of the public for mutton and lamb of good quality would no doubt soon lead to an increase of breeding and feeding operations, besides relieving somewhat the present heavy demand for beef and pork in the face of a short supply."

CASE WON BY GIRL LAWYERS.

Court Congratulates Miss Ogden and Miss Adams on Their Success.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—The law firm of Adams & Ogden, which stands for Miss Annette Adams and Miss Marguerite Ogden, won a law case handed before Judge Trout and received the congratulations of the court.

Miss Adams pleaded the suit for divorce of Mrs. Maud C. Rodgers of 254 Hermann street, who charged that her husband had demanded that she pay $10 a month rent for her bedroom in her own home. The husband from whom she was parted by Judge Trout is Frank H. Rodgers, a furniture mover.

Other cruelties which she could not endure were beatings, being made a target for the coffee pot at breakfast and continual harsh language. Her father, William Carroll, corroborated her testimony.

Miss Adams and Miss Ogden, daughter of Superior Judge Ogden of Oakland, was admitted to practice only a few months ago.

When Miss Adams had concluded her case and the judge had granted

ON HER KITCHEN STOVE.

It is interesting to note that the most successful remedy for woman's ills was originally prepared nearly forty years ago by Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., by steeping roots and herbs on her kitchen stove and supplied to friends and neighbors without cost. Its fame spread; the demand grew; until now many tons of roots and herbs are used each year in order to supply this famous remedy which has proved such a marvelous success in controlling diseases of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.—Adv.
