Woman and Her Varied Interests

Trousseau Shopping.

Gathering a trousseau together is a fascinating, though a somewhat fatiguing task. The sensible prospective bride decides before she begins her shopping just how much she intends to spend on her trousseau—and how much more she can spend if she is sorely tempted—and she does not buy nearly as many things nowadays as in the past, because fashions change so quickly.

She spends a generous amount on her wedding gown, and if she changes it to a "going away gown" after the ceremony and reception, that also is often rather elaborate, for the custom of going to a hotel for a day or two before the honeymoon trip has brought about a change. The going away costume is generally a handsome three piece affair in moire, charmeuse or taffeta instead of the severely tailored frock for travelling, which also figures importantly in the trousseau.

One or two handsome evening frocks and three simple ones are quite enough for the average bride, and for one of these a white lace is a sensible choice. Time was when brides brought as their dower large chests to overflowing with mounds of snowy linen and lingerie, but not nowadays. It is no longer expedient or necessary.

Advice About Baggage.

Don't overload yourself with baggage if you are going abroad for a few months. Try, if possible, to get along with one trunk, and if that piece of baggage must be of a large size have it of the wardrobe type, as with one of these there need be no unpacking at every stopping place. The two dozen or more of gowns, frocks and coats remain on their hangers, occupying one side of the box, and the lingerie, shoes and accessories in the various drawers which fill the remaining space. Lacking a wardrobe trunk, best take a small steamer trunk, preferably of enameled leather, and a medium sized hatbox of matching material.

But be sure that the latter piece has a tray as in that event during short side trips it will hold everything likely to be needed for a week or ten days. Meanwhile the trunk may be expressed ahead to the next stopping place. Express charges throughout Europe are very high, and this fact must be taken into consideration when planning the disposal of the various pieces of luggage. That is why the enameled leather or the straw hamper is more popular with the American tourist who knows the ropes than is the big Saratoga.

Steamer rolls of small size are preferable to satchels and Gladstones for hand luggage, for their capacity seems to be almost limitless. Provided an extra hat is not needed a tourist can easily manage for a week or more with what one of these rolls will hold, and the receptacle is quite as easily carried as is a dress suit case.

To accord with the steamer roll of dark brown canvas or of rubberized clean plaid serge, bound and strapped with leather, there should be an umbrella case. When traveling nothing ruins an umbrella so quickly as exposing it to layers of dust and allowing its cover to come into more or less violent contact with other kinds of luggage, as is certain to happen if the silk spread and the ornamental handles are not protected.

New England Fair Opens.

DERRY, N. H., Aug. 19.—Amid the strident cries of the bally-hoo boys and the enticing perorations of the midway barkers, the great five-day Rockingham fair opened today with its booths and pens filled with New England's prize food products and live stock. This year's fair is expected to eclipse even the famous Brockton fair.

CARLOAD PEACHES
SENT FROM STANFIELD

(Special Correspondence.)

STANFIELD, Aug. 19.—One carload of peaches was shipped the last of the week and by the first of the week will begin in earnest. Most of the peaches will be handled by Page & Son of Portland, owners of the big Page ranch here.

The Ladies' Aid held an ice cream social Saturday afternoon and evening. It is needless to say everybody Priest Faces Trial for Theft.

ROME, Aug. 19.—Charged with stealing the famous Madonna painted by Giambellini, which was reported destroyed in the fire which razed the Church of Santa Maria in October, 1911, a priest named Peter Crescini, today is in jail, awaiting trial. The authorities allege the priest removed the famous painting and then set fire to the church. Later he is said to have sold the picture to a wealthy connoisseur who afterwards became conscience stricken and returned it to Crescini. The priest then sent it to a dealer in Florence where it was discovered and seized by a government inspector who immediately arrested Crescini upon hearing the Florence dealer's story of how the latter came by it.

POPULARITY OF CONNIE A HELP

Baseball Leader Gets More "Tips" On Young Phenoms Than Any Other Manager.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—One of the many reasons for the wonderful popularity of Connie Mack, Philadelphia Athletics manager, even in towns and cities where the fans have never seen the long, congenial Irish leader, was told here today by one of his friends. The story might also throw some light on why Connie Mack is "tipped off" to more alleged young phenoms than any other three managers in both big leagues.

Shortly after Manager Mack won his first world's pennant he was besieged with requests for the old shoes, stockings, gloves, blouses and trousers that had been worn out by his men in their scramble for the world's baseball prize. Mack knew that other managers before him had been similarly besieged. But here's the difference. The other managers either paid no attention to the requests or sent back refusals. Mack didn't do any such thing. He carefully investigated the requests, filed them in the order of their coming and occasionally shipped out a discarded glove or a worn pair of shoes or a bent catcher's mask to some beseeching young player. Connie admitted all this was a lot of trouble, but he believed that if he used discretion he could plant a glove or a suit or a pair of shoes in some locality where the wearer and the other players would remember Connie Mack if some likely looking young player developed. Mack says he has secured several promising recruits this way.

This request for discarded baseball paraphernalia, by the way does not come solely from the east and middle west. The Indian team of the St. Mary's Mission school, at Omak, Wn., is today disporting itself in the suits which Connie Mack's team wore when it won its last world's championship. Mack figures that if another Bender or a Meyers is developed at St. Mary's he will have first chance to look him over.

Pennsylvania Heptasophs Celebrate. PITTSBURGH, PA., Aug. 19.—More than 1000 members of the Western Conclaves of Western Pennsylvania of the Improved Order of Heptasophs, including their friends and families today celebrated their thirty-fifth anniversary at Olympic near McKeesport. Three baseball games, field and track events for men, women, girls and boys and swimming races were on the program for this afternoon.

Peevish Children Suffer With Worms

Don't be angry with your child because he or she is continually irritable. In ninety-nine out of one hundred cases you will find that the trouble is worms.

Among the common symptoms of the presence of round worms are nervousness, which often leads to epileptic attacks—dizziness, vertigo, capricious appetite, restless sleep, itching of the eyes and nose, nausea and often hysteria. Round worms are several inches in length and infest the stomach. Occasionally several hundred are found in a single person. Thread worms are smaller, often not longer than a quarter of an inch. The symptoms denoting their presence are about the same, but in this case the child has no appetite.

Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge is unsurpassed in removing worms. Not only will it destroy them, but its tonic effects will restore the stomach to healthy activity. As Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge seldom purges, the indications of its beneficial effects will be the improved condition of the person using it.

Millions of parents have praised this medicine for more than eighty years. Insist upon Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge and accept no other. Sold by druggists everywhere. Dr. D. Jayne & Son, Philadelphia, Pa.
