BEN TILLMAN "COMES BACK"

South Carolina Solon of the Picturesque Language Shows Old Time Vigor Again.

(By Burton K. Standish, written for the United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—"Pitchfork Ben" Tillman has joined the "come backs." The aged South Carolina solon, whose picturesque language and vitriolic power of invective earned him his nickname, has been in poor health for four years. He has not once during that time shown flashes of his old-time vigor in debate.

But the other day, "Pitchfork Ben" cut loose again. He equalled all past records for vivid language in speaking his little say on woman's suffrage and comparing the present times to days of decadent Rome.

"It appears to me," the senator remarked, "that the relation between 'votes for women' and divorce, if not one of cause and effect, is at least one of mutual acceleration. I am no pessimist, but I am enough of a scientist to accept the truth whenever I see it. It is pleasant or unpleasant, and I have read history to no purpose if it has not taught me that the purity and stability of the family has in all ages been the surest bulwark of the state. It has ever been shown that when the marriage relation became insecure and women quitted their own sphere to enter that of man, the decay and fall of states followed.

"A most disgraceful and mortifying fact which every American must blush for is to see how the American millionaires are buying their daughters titled husbands. Some count, baron or lord, no matter how much a debauchee and scoundrel he may be, is looked up by the rich father and purchased in the open market.

"To me such people seem to be going straight to hell, and I am no stickler for religion." Some speech.

Once a session house democrats and republicans carry their partisan fight to the baseball diamond. The game furnishes Washington newspaper paragraphs with plenty of material for weeks. Now comes the announcement from the senate that the staid and elderly statesmen have challenged the juniors in the house to a golf championship match. The senate already has a flourishing golf club, and the beauty about it is that there are titles for every member. Senator Gallinger, who never had a golf stick in his hand, is honorary vice president. Vice President Marshall, who has actually played two games of golf, is honorary president. However, there are some honest to goodness golfers in the club. There is Senator O'Gorman of New York, president; Senator Cummins, of Iowa, ranked as the senate champion; Hollis, New Hampshire; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Lippitt, Rhode Island; Saulsbury, Delaware; Pittman, Nevada; Bristol, Kansas; Townsend, Michigan; Walsh, Montana, and Ransdell of Louisiana.

The only representative whom senators fear in their forthcoming match is Representative Oglesby, of New York, who covered the 8 holes on the difficult Chevy Chase links, in 77, which is mighty close to bogey.

"We haven't the date set for the match yet," said Senator Saulsbury, "but it's up to the house."

At least one member of the senate of the United States has confessed his misdeeds. His name is Page. He comes from Vermont. He stood on the senate floor on the afternoon when the sugar tariff schedule was being disposed of and pleaded for a little more protection for the maple sugar of his state.

"I plead guilty," he said hesitatingly, to having been an insidious lobbyist for the past five years, and now it all goes for naught." Democratic and republican members alike nodded solemnly. Then one by one they chuckled. For scarcely a man among them had not accepted from Page of Vermont, along in March of any one of these past five seasons of "sugaring-off," a box of the finest maple sugar that ever reached the capital. Each box was packed full of half ounce cakes separately wrapped and on the cover was a picture of the old-fashioned bobbed drawn by a yoke of steers, waiting beside a big maple tree in the woods. It was a lobby gift that reached the spot. Senator Williams for the democrats tried to explain why maple sugar did not need governmental bounty, but he had been caught in Page's net along with the others, and the best he would do was to set the senate laughing. Page lost his tariff argument by a margin of only two votes—the closest rollcall yet had on the bill.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured. "I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Yorks, the merchant here, persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhart, Oriole, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attack of diarrhoea can almost invariably be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

RURAL CHURCH IS LOSING OUT

James W. Street Declares That Rural Ministers to Blame for Decadence.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 12.—Hundreds of rural churches are dead and hundreds more are dying and the rural ministers are to blame entirely, according to James W. Street, of Mackinaw of the Rural Church Department at Bethany Park, Ind. In an article written for the United Press J. W. Street scathingly denounces the young minister who accepts a rural pulpit merely as a stepping stone for a charge in the city. His article follows:

That the rural church is decadent is not questioned by those who have scanned the stream that overflows into the urban centers of population. It no longer possesses the strength to mould the lives of its people on a large spiritual plane. Rural communities are no longer immune from modern evils. The grossest forms of sin are now found amid the most attractive rural surroundings. "Country slums" are no longer a curiosity but an alarming situation demanding immediate attention. Hundreds of rural churches are dead and other hundreds are dying. It is not because there is no want or desire for the services rural churches might render that so many are dead. It is because the right kind of leadership is not present.

The largest single item in shaping the policy of the rural church is the minister. He comes as a novagelist and organizes the congregation. He is called to direct its workers in their efforts to bring the "kingdom of God among men." He is given full charge of the work. His time is his to be used as he directs. Seldom does his people question the use he makes of it. The people have confidence in him and trust him in all church matters. They usually pay him a larger salary than any member of his congregation receives, notwithstanding the great future regarding the low salaries for ministers. The homes of the community are open to him. Every officer of the church has the right to look to him for help in directing the work of the church. How has he acted under such circumstances?

Only Stepping Stone. From a careful investigation of many cases it has been established that nearly every man who has accepted a call to a rural church does so only as a stepping stone to city work. He has been imbued with the idea that only beginners and broken down failures find a place in the rural service. He believes that the big men and the strong men always go ultimately to the city and that he will soon go. This idea results in sermons that smell of the rear and rush of the city. They are flavored with the city opportunity and its task. They are colored with the city needs and its sins. He sees no local observation except to preach some sermons that he expects to use later in his city church. He reads no books except those that deal with the city service.

Ask him about the problems of his community and he will look at you as though you were a fool. Ask him if he has planned for the enlargement of the service his church renders the people and he smiles at your simplicity. The Great White Way of the city holds him enthralled and he does not know that many of the evils of the city are already transplanted in his own locality.

Many Are Being Harrowed. With this attitude is it any wonder that his farmer folk grow hungry for spiritual food suited to their needs? They grow weary of being harrowed with the sins of the city while their boys and girls are going to the devil along the county lanes. Is it any wonder they have turned away from the church and the rural minister?

Then the minister, who has always regarded his charge as a mere stepping stone, and who has always had an eye and an ear open solely for the call to the city, begins to buse them as being hardfisted, miserly and lacking in desire for the gospel.

They asked for bread and he has given them a stone. He has eaten their bread and used his strength to prepare for the city. Is it any wonder they have grown tired of this kind of minister? We have talked with hundreds of farmers in regard to this. They love God and yearn for the service the church could render. Many of them have told the writer, "Send us a man who loves our community and studies its possibilities and its needs; who will be sympathetic with us and see our faults and try to help us correct them, and we will furnish the money."

Where can you find a minister with ability to undertake this task? There are a few of them and they are doing good work. They receive good salaries and are doing a great service. Give us the right kind of ministers and thousands of rural churches now dead will be resurrected and other thousands now dying will be revived. The rural minister must be consecrated to his task and be willing to give his life for his people. And when that life is thus given, as Jesus said, "He will find it" and with it the life of the rural church.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12.—Three judges of the superior court of Sacramento were called as character witnesses by the defense in the trial of Diggs and Attorney Harris, charged with subornation and perjury before Federal Judge Van Fleet. Judges Post, Fields and Shields testified that Harris' reputation was good. Nell Barton followed the judges on the stand. She swore she was importuned by Harris to "fix" things with Marsha Warrington to testify falsely in the Diggs and Caminetti cases.
