EXPLORER GIVEN UP AS LOST IN WILDS

HUGH DARRELL WAS LAST SEEN BY WHITE MEN LATE IN FALL OF 1910.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 31.—(Special)—Hugh Darrell, 30 years of age, a Scotch explorer and prospector, who was last seen by white men late in the fall of 1910 at Javerpool bay on the Arctic ocean, has been given up for dead by officers of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, stationed at Herschell Island, Inspector Leyla, Corporal Trickey and Constables Sommers, Chipman and Bates, who on arrival in Edmonton a few days ago, brought down Darrell's personal effects and relics. They are now communicating with the explorer's parents in Scotland to ascertain if further search is desired.

Darrell's parents are being informed that the police thing a search would be useless, as the reaches of the great northwest are so vast it would require years to cover the ground. Meanwhile, every effort is being made to trace the explorer from camp to camp in the silent north country.

Constable Sommers, who has been at Herschell Island the last three years, is on the way to Scotland, where he will pass the winter, said last night that Darrell traveled with the mounted police in the summer of 1910, when Hon. Frank Oliver of Edmonton, then minister of the interior under the Laurier government, made his overland trip to Dawson.

"Darrell met us at the Arctic Red river, 40 miles from Fort McPherson on the Mackenzie river," Constable Sommers said, "and he guided the patrol accompanying Mr. Oliver across the portage from La Pierre's house on the Bell river to Fort McPherson on the Peel river. Darrell was familiar with the country having travelled through it from Fort McPherson to Dawson. He told Mr. Oliver that he was on the way to Banks Land, a large island in the Arctic ocean, off the north coast of Alberta."

Constable Sommers reported that Darrell, accompanied by Jacob, a half breed guide, started from Fort McPherson for the northern island. The guide leaving him near the Husky lakes. The explorer was next seen at Ballie Island by the crew of the Rosie H., a small trading schooner. He passed a few days with the sailors. Then with only a light outfit and a pair of akis, he started across the ice, and on Liverpool Bay, on the mainland spent several days with an Eskimo. Nothing was heard of him afterward. The Eskimo, who last saw Darrell, reported to the mounted police months afterward.

Speaking of the blonde Eskimos, the discovery of which was reported by Explorer Stefansson and for which G. L. Deschambeault, a French-Canadian trader and trapper at Fort Simpson, and Joseph and William Hudson, guides, claim credit, Constable Sommers said:

"The Eskimos that Stefansson undoubtedly found are way beyond the Mackenzie river and live along Coronation gulf, some 600 miles east of the delta. There are blonde Eskimos in the Mackenzie river delta, but they are not the real ones, being half-breeds of Norse descent, and are the result of intermarriage between Eskimos and whalers."

Regarding the morals of the Eskimos, the constable said that those living on Herschell Island and in the vicinity had been demoralized to a certain extent by whalers, who in former times wintered there in large numbers.

"It will take many years to overcome the harm done to them by the visiting whalers, but the next generation will be all right, thanks to the active work of the missionaries."

Constable Sommers paid a fine tribute to the missionaries working in the north country, saying they are brave spirits. There are many who have not the remotest conception of the work that is being done by C. E. Whitaker who has spent 15 years among the native tribes, and his associates, some of whom have passed the best years of their lives in this unselfish labor.

NATURAL GAS PIPED 75 MILES IS SOLD AT NOMINAL RATE

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 31.—Natural gas, piped from the Vegreville district, 75 miles east of here, can be delivered to consumers in Edmonton at nine cents a thousand cubic feet, according to F. G. Clapp and L. G. Huntley, gas experts of Pittsburgh, who have submitted an exhaustive report to the municipality. The town of Vegreville already has 330,000 cubic feet daily available. The experts also visited several other districts, including Pelican Falls, Wataskwin, Meriville, Toffield, Athabasca, all of which are reported to possess merit. Vegreville is the most promising. It is estimated that gas from the first named would cost from 24 to 45 cents a thousand feet, on account of the distance to be covered by the pipe line. Mayor William Short, who is also chairman of the board of commissioners has been delegated to submit recommendations to the city council. The pipe line and plant is estimated to cost about $3,850,000.

BEGIN ARGUMENTS TO REVERSE LABOR CONVICTIONS

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Vigorous attacking the methods by which their clients were convicted at Indianapolis, attorneys for the labor men who were found guilty of complicity in the gigantic dynamite plot opened arguments Wednesday for a reversal of the verdict in the lower tribunal, in the federal court of appeals. Attorney Zelline asserted that Judge Anderson treated the defendants unfairly. He attacked the conviction on the grounds that the indictments were faulty.

ATTACKS OPPONENTS OF THE RECALL PRINCIPLE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Senator Norris of Nebraska, expressed in the senate an emphatic dissent from the view advanced by opponents of the recall that the effect of Sulzer's removal proved such a method unnecessary. Norris said: "A political machine recalled Sulzer. He was not recalled by the people but by a boss. Who can contend that machine control and bossism such as were exercised in the Sulzer case are equivalent or a worthy comparison with the recall provided by statute."
