RESOLUTION DEBATE BRINGS OUT SPIRIT OF WAR IN CAPITAL

SUPPRESSED EXCITEMENT AND GRAVE TENSION ARE CHARACTERISTICS.

Democrats Cheer President's Message at Joint Session—Orders Are Sent Army and Navy—Many Republicans Silent—Progressives Pledge Support to President.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—In an atmosphere of suppressed excitement reflecting grave tension and patriotic fervor, President Wilson asked congress in person yesterday for approval of his purpose to use the army and navy to force General Huerta to apologize for indignities offered to the America government.

It was the first time since the war with Spain that the president had placed so grave an international crisis before the national legislature. Opposition is Pressed.

As he read his message the applause came largely from the democratic side, many republicans remaining conspicuously silent. It pressed an opposition to the president's request, which was not long in making its appearance.

Speeches in the house and opposition in the senate committee on foreign relations showed that the prospect of passing immediately the joint resolution approving the president's course was by no means as bright as it had seemed.

President Wilson had pointed out that under precedent he did not need the authority of congress to act, but merely sought their counsel, advice and approval "in a matter possibly of so grave consequence."

Orders Go to Army and Navy. While congress deliberated and Majority Leader Underwood urged prompt action, so that if American forces were fired on they would be free to act, the executive branch of the government issued orders to the army and navy with systematic regularity.

The army was cautioned to be on the alert and active preparations to use the militia as volunteer forces in case of further emergencies were begun. The warships of the navy were ordered to concentrate on Tampico and Vera Cruz as their first objective point.

Many Republicans Silent. The president's strongly phrased expression of his determination to secure approval for the use of armed forces "in such ways and to such extent as may be necessary to obtain from General Huerta and his adherents the fullest recognition of the rights and dignity of the United States" was received with a burst of enthusiasm, but again many republicans were silent.

As the president left the house chamber he chatted with house and senate leaders about the steps he had in mind. He did not think it necessary as yet to ask for an appropriation but already such a measure had been introduced in the senate.

Secretary Bryan stayed at the capitol to discuss with members of the house committee on foreign affairs the phraseology of the joint resolution approving the president's course in using the army and navy.

The senate in the meantime passed the house bill, providing for the organizing of the militia as volunteers on authority of the president but the resolution was held up on a motion to reconsider by Senator Reed.

Consideration of the joint resolution to carry out the president's purpose of enforcing the demand on Huerta occupied the attention of the two congressional committees in charge of foreign affairs, and the bill soon was reported to the house, but held up in the senate committee to await the action of the other body.

Progressives Pledge Support. Representative Pou of North Carolina, a democrat, supported the rule, declaring "the time has come to put an end to these outrages in Mexico."

Progressive support for the resolution was pledged by Progressive Leader Murdock. "This resolution needs one thing more than anything else," he said. "That is the unanimous vote of the congress of the United States. When my country's dignity is in question I have but one rule. That is: Follow the flag. This resolution will do one thing that should be done. It will send around the world the word that our flag must be respected. I am tired of 'watchful waiting'."

A cheer from the democrats greeted Murdock's speech. Lenroot, republican, favored the resolution, saying that its passage was the "best means of preventing war in Mexico." Republican Leader Mann spoke vigorously against the president's policy.

"If the incidents which the president has related to us had occurred with England, Germany, France or any other great nation," he said, "we would not have such a resolution pending here now. But we think that because Mexico is weak we have the moral right to declare war against her with high hopes of success. I would not declare war against Mexico for something for which I would not declare war against England or France."

Mr. Mann said the president was "issuing orders" to congress. "This is a declaration of war," he said. "This is the helpful ally of the murderous crew in northern Mexico who are murdering men and outraging women."

He insisted that it was purely a case of personal resentment of the president because he did not like Huerta.

"I don't condone the methods by which Huerta secured the high position he now holds," continued the leader, "nor do I believe in a declaration of war against him because Wilson does not happen to like him."

"We owe more than a salute from Huerta to the flag. We owe it to make the flag stand for right and justice and peace."

Underwood Speaks. Representative Underwood closed the debate in support of the rule. As he took the floor the democrats cheered.

"This resolution," he said, "may mean war. It may mean peace. Let us hope that the ultimate result of the passage of the resolution will be peace and good order and the establishment of friendship between the two governments."

Representative McDonald, of Michigan, progressive, supported the resolution as a step to prevent war.

Representative Kent, independent, California, expressing regret that he could not agree with the president, said the resolution was a "declaration of war" and asserted that by passing it congress would "condemn to death many of our citizens in Mexico."

Representative Mendenhall, republican, California, also opposed the resolution, asserting that it meant useless war.

"I have always believed," said Representative Madden of Illinois, "that nothing less than a nation could provoke another nation to war. But here we are asked to declare war against the individual, Huerta. We have no cause for war. I would go as far as any man to preserve the honor of the nation, but I am not prepared to justify war for any such trivial cause as this."

Opposition is Varied. Opposition developed along many different lines. Some wanted to give the president authority to deal with the whole Mexican problem; others objected to individualizing Huerta in the resolution, while others thought the use of the word "justified" in reference to the president's course might commit them into an expression of approval of other phases of the Mexican question.

Acting Chairman Shively and Senator Swanson of the senate committee on foreign relations, went to the White House at 6 o'clock for a conference about the text of the resolution while the house debated it.

Mann Asks Two Hours. When Flood asked unanimous consent that the resolution and report be read, Leader Mann reserved the right to the present consideration of the resolution and demanded an explanation. Chairman Flood said he was prepared to allow half an hour's debate on the resolution on each side of the house. Representative Mann asserted the minority needed two hours' debate.

"The president has advised us of conditions," Underwood said. "We would not insist on putting this resolution through at this time if this were not a matter of paramount importance. But with the president's message delivered our troops may be fired on at any time. We must act at once."

A round of democratic applause greeted this.

"I am not alarmed by that statement," Mann replied, "but the president has asked for our advice and we should have time to give it. Before we equip the nation for war we should at least have time to draw our breaths. I am always ready to support the president in his conduct of foreign relations, but I value my country above my allegiance to the president."

A cheer from the republican side greeted this statement. Shouts of "bring in a rule." "Hurry it through," from the democratic side, interrupted the effort to obtain unanimous consent.

Representative Mann finally agreed that he would accept an hour and a half. Representative Underwood said the democrats would be satisfied with one hour.

Representative Sisson, democrat, of Missouri, declaring that the resolution was "a declaration of war and as such was a matter which congress should duly consider," objected to any agreement.

Those who voted against the resolution in the house were: Democrats—George, Kindel, Sisson, Stephens (Miss.), and Witherspoon—5. PACIFIC FLEET READY FOR ACTIVE SERVICE

RESERVE FIGHTING VESSELS COULD BE IN ACTION IN 15 DAYS.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 20.—"We are not looking for trouble, but we are ready for anything," said Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, chatting democratically on Mexican war conditions, naval preparedness and numerous other things at the Union depot yesterday.

The secretary, on his way from San Francisco to Seattle and the Bremerton navy yard, obligingly hopped off the Shasta Limited when a newspaper camera man asked him to pose for a picture. He strolled bare-headed up and down the platform during the Shasta's half-hour wait here.

"The navy is prepared," said Mr. Roosevelt, who has been detailed by his superior, Secretary Daniels, to take personal charge of the naval situation on the Pacific coast. "In 15 to 20 days all the vessels of the reserve fleet now at Bremerton, including the armored cruisers South Dakota and West Virginia, could be made ready for sea service, if need be, to supplement the vessels already in commission."

These two vessels carry 800 men each. About the only difficulty in the way of putting them into commission at once is lack of men. Because they are on reserve, they are manned only by skeleton crews of about 200 men each.

"The navy at present is recruited up to the full legal strength and we would have to get authority to enlist more men. It would be easy enough to get the men."

The 1600 men needed to man two such large vessels as the South Dakota and the West Virginia, Mr. Roosevelt went on to explain, would give a full complement for six gunboats. Inasmuch as light draft gunboats, which can go anywhere, would be even more effective than the big fighting ships in the kind of service required in Mexican waters, Mr. Roosevelt intimated that gunboats will be sent if more warships are called for on the Pacific side.
