Sugar High; Won't Can Fruit.

PULLMAN, Wash., Aug. 21.—Sugar was quoted by local growers today at $8.50 per sack, an increase of $3.25 per sack since the first of July. Many housewives have stated that they will can no more fruit unless sugar drops to something near its normal price.

Snake river fruit men fear that they will be unable to find a market for their entire output with the prevailing price on sugar, although fruit of all kinds is considerably lower than for several years past.

"HARD LUCK" EVERS IS BACK IN GAME

Johnny Evers.

After an absence of more than a week because of illness and death in his family Johnny Evers, the plucky little captain of the Boston Braves, who are making such a wonderful race for the pennant has rejoined the team. Every is playing a better game than ever at second. He is reported to be the highest salaried man in baseball and is certainly one of the best. No man in either league has had a harder time of it than Evers has during the past few years. In spite of the hard luck he has suffered Evers has always had a smile and a word of encouragement for his team mates. His presence alone has had something to do with the Braves wonderful race for the pennant.

WHOLESALE EXPLAINS ADVANCE IN PRICES PREDICTS MORE OF IT

Throwing some light upon the advance in the prices of foodstuffs since the opening of the European war is a letter received by one of the leading grocery houses from a wholesale house. According to the letter, the soaring of sugar is justified by the fact that England, cut off from Germany, is drawing upon Cuba for her supplies. Further advances in the price are predicted.

Speaking of food products in general, the wholesalers write that all imported products are affected by the war inasmuch as all shipping from foreign ports are done in English, French and German ships which are subject to seizure. Many companies are, consequently, instructing their vessels to remain in neutral and friendly ports. War risk insurance of from five to seven and a half percent and the added cost of transportation justify an increase in the prices of such products as currants, peels, oils, Cross & Blackwell goods etc.

Relative to the sugar market the wholesalers have the following to say:

Sugars—The sugar situation is slightly different. England consumes approximately 175,000 tons per month, which ordinarily is furnished by Germany. This source of supply being absolutely cut off, she naturally seeks to replenish her stores from Cuba. Actual sugars in England are selling today at $12 per cwt. and English importers are purchasing every available pound of Cuban sugar as fast as it is being offered, and have even gone so far as to purchase refined sugar from the New York refineries to the extent of 1,800,000 to 2,000,000 bags. The effect of this extraordinary and unexpected demand for sugar and the comparatively small supplies still available in Cuba have already doubled the cost of raws and refiners are unable to buy raw sugar, duty paid New York, for less than $6.52 today. On this basis our refined price should be above $6.00, and that sugar has not reached the level is due to the fact that refiners are still working on raws bought at the lower prices but it seems inevitable as soon as present supplies are exhausted that sugar must advance still more, not due to any cause traceable to either the jobber or the refiner, but due to the fact that sugars are urgently needed for export, and supplies are entirely too small to take care of this extra buying pressure.

We give below statistics showing shortage that may be expected provided there is no cessation of hostilities before the first of the year:

Consumption per month—
United States	300,000 tons
Great Britain	175,000 tons
	475,000 tons
5 months to new crop—
Total requirements	2,375,000 tons
Available stock—
Cuban stock	380,000 tons
Cuban stock not yet ground	90,000 tons
Stock in U. S.	3,800,000 tons
Afloat to U. S.	143,000 tons
Beet sugar crop	650,000 tons
Estimated stock in—
Hawaii	150,000 tons
	1,813,000 tons
Shortage	562,000 tons

New York refiners during the last few days have bought raw sugars to the extent of 75,000 tons on today's basis, $6.52 for raw sugar (money value of purchase approximately $1,000,000). These sugars are for both immediate delivery and delivery the first half of September which would indicate that New York refiners do not anticipate any reduction in price for some time to come.
