Return from Salem Fair.

James Blakely of Enterprise, who had a string of horses in the relay race at the state fair last week, and his rider, E. A. Armstrong, arrived in Pendleton this morning. But for a fall in the race Friday, the Blakely horses would have won the six-day race easily, having finished ahead of the field every other day. The fall of the horse Friday, however, cost 21 seconds and only five seconds could be made up Saturday. D. Young, riding the Drumheller string, won first money. Blakely took second and Del Blacett, riding his own string, won third. Blacett returned to Pendleton yesterday.

Six well known boys of the city, A. B. McReynolds, Eddie Rayburn, Verne Boynton, C. T. Vaughan, L. R. McReynolds and D. L. McReynolds, have learned the folly of disturbing the peaceful slumbers of an officer of the law. With two of them as principals and the others as witnesses, they repaired to a corner of West Alta street at 1 o'clock Sunday morning and stopped to settle a grievance. Instead of fighting the matter out, they indulged in loud and unseemly language for a half hour or more until Officer Alex Manning was aroused from his slumbers. They all pleaded not guilty to disorderly conduct this morning and appeared this afternoon to stand trial.
