Corner of Opera House block during prohibition era in Pendleton. Note the dilapidated condition. All rooms were empty, the building run down and a sight to discourage people locating here.

CITIZENS AND TAXPAYERS

Do you realize the condition of Pendleton, during the dry era from 1908 to 1911? It was conservatively estimated there were 400 to 500 vacant houses in our town during that period, and our population of 7000 in 1908 decreased to 4500 inhabitants in 1910.

During this period our neighboring city of Walla Walla, which was wet, had its most prosperous era. The building permits, issued in Pendleton during 1910 aggregated $29,950.25. During 1911 when it was determined by the people to have Home Rule and a regulated wet town, the permits were $44,960.00, and during 1912 $61,659.00, with a steady increase since.

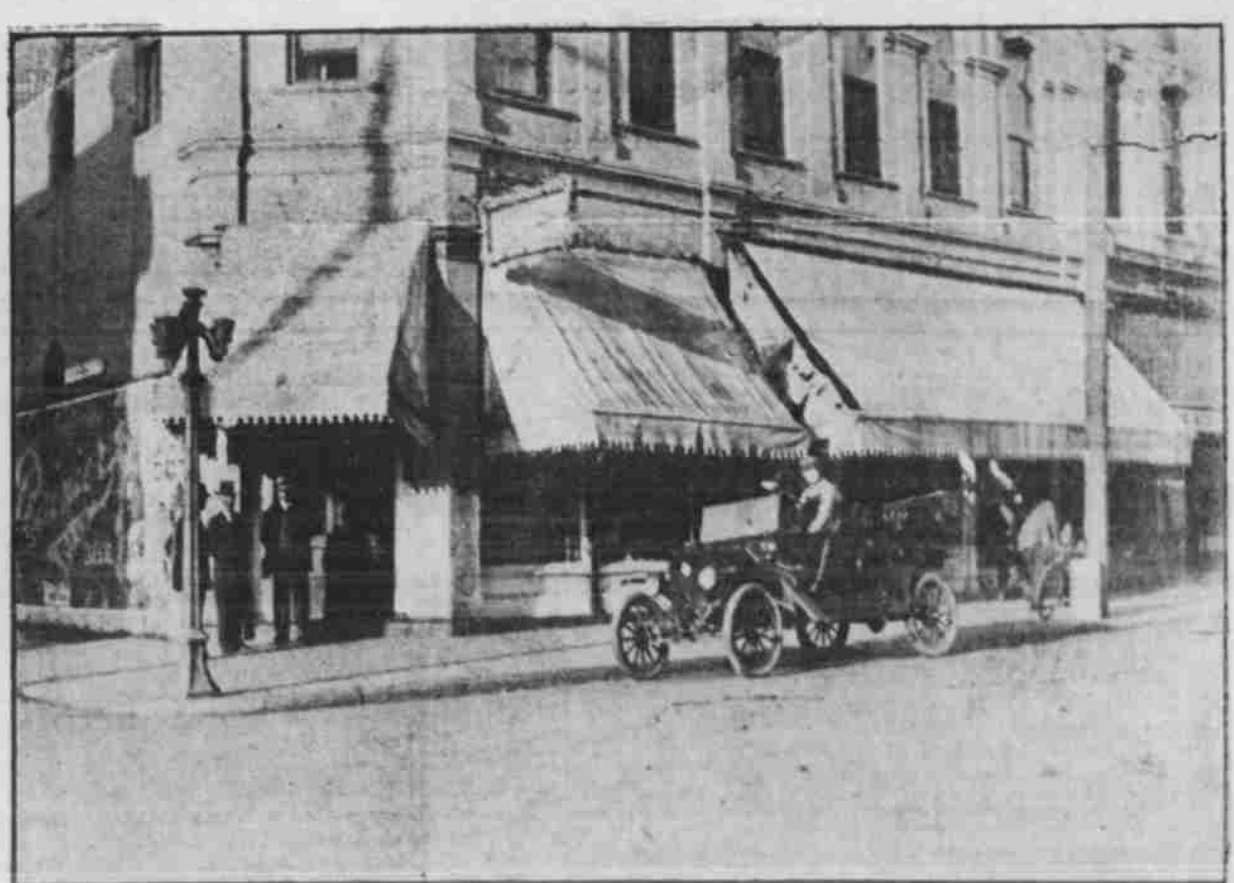

From best advices the state of Washington will again vote wet, and if by your votes you deliberately sacrifice the business of our communities and build up that of the Washington cities and towns, you are depriving your fellow man and neighbor of employment and forcing him to desert his little home and seek new localities.

The prohibition law as proposed does not prevent liquors from being supplied our communities from neighboring states, but it does kill Home Rule and allows country sections and communities to buy and ship in all the liquor they have the money to buy.

Hired agitators are parading the county telling you the hop and barley industries of our state will not suffer by prohibition, but the actual grower tells you he will be injured and asks your protection at the polls. Ask yourself honestly what is gained and what lost by prohibition? Business destroyed and diverted, bootleggers and blind tigers substituted for licensed saloons.

Same building shown above as it appears today during prosperous times under Home Rule. Corner room occupied by Opera bar, next room adjoining occupied by Griggs' grocery, upstairs all rented for housekeeping apartments and the building front plastered and painted. Which condition of affairs would you prefer in Pendleton?
